

'Careful what you say': Wills and Kate launch YouTube channel

■ Debut video includes clips of couple on royal engagements, with William joking: 'these guys are filming everything'

The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge have become YouTubers, launching their own channel on the global video-sharing site with a fast-edited promotional video showing them at work and play.

Their YouTube debut post begins with the couple sitting on a sofa. Prince William jokes with Kate while pointing to the camera and people behind it, saying: "Be careful what you say now because these guys are filming everything."

exclusive videos

"I know," Kate replies, as the 25-second video – accompanied by a staccato electronic soundtrack – rapidly shows clips of the two of them on engagements, including Kate trying her hand at archery, William flying a helicopter, and the couple on their official visit to Bhutan.

It also shows a laughing Kate shearing sheep during a visit to a Lake District farm, William sitting with Sir David Attenborough to promote the duke's Earthshot environment prize, and the couple admiring billboards showcasing Kate's Hold Still photographic project. In one clip, an outtake from this year's St Patrick's Day video, Kate tells William: "You don't need to roll your Rs."

The future king and queen will continue to feature in exclusive videos posted on the site in the coming months.

first royals

The Cambridges already use Twitter and Instagram to promote their work, often posting videos of engagements.

Last week, in

CAMBRIDGE CONFIDENTIAL: the channel provides a glimpse into the royal couple's family life celebration of their 10th wedding anniversary, they released a professionally shot video that gave a glimpse into their family life, playing with their children at their Norfolk home, in sand dunes on a nearby beach, and toasting marshmallows round a campfire.

They are not the first royals to turn to YouTube. The Queen launched her own channel on the platform in 2007 to promote the British monarchy. The concept of video-sharing was reportedly explained to her by her granddaughters, Princesses Beatrice and Eugenie.

In September, Prince Charles launched RE:TV, a content platform for short films with Charles as editor-in-chief that was born out of his Sustainable Markets initiative as a way to "inform and inspire audiences about sustainability".

While members of the royal family have long used social media, it has been a particularly popular tool during the coronavirus pandemic, with videos of their virtual engagements released on a regular basis.

Rapid retreat for French trawlermen as Navy flex their muscles in Jersey dispute

■ PM despatches two armed boats as 60-strong flotilla threatens to blockade St Helier

TEMPERS flared this week off the coast of Jersey as a simmering dispute between the British and French over fishing rights boiled over.

Following a confrontation between a flotilla of French fishermen and locals the Prime Minister sent two Royal Navy ships on Wednesday to guard Jersey's main, forcing a French retreat and with it, it seems a calming of emotions.

Barely 24 hours later Downing Street announced that one of the naval boats would return to the UK immediately and the second would leave Jersey on Friday after talks with the island's government. However, a spokesman added that the navy remained "on standby" to provide "any further assistance Jersey requests".

The dispute with French trawlermen stems from changed rules following the UK's departure from the EU's single market and customs union on 31 January 2020, meaning it left the common fisheries policy that has peacefully divvied up the spoils of Europe's waters since the 1970s.

It also ended the Bay of Granville agreement, signed in 2000 by Britain and the Channel Islands government, which had established a pattern of rights for French boats to fish up to three miles from the islands' coasts.

Within the Brexit trade and cooperation agreement struck last Christmas Eve there is a new EU-UK fisheries agreement that offers French fishers the continuation of the status quo in a zone between six and 12 miles from the UK's shores up to 2026, if they can prove that they had previously been operating in those waters.

Jersey published on Friday a list of licenses issued for 41 French boats of more than 12 metres that could prove they had met the requirement they had fished in the island's waters for at least 10 days over a period of 12 months within the past three years. The licenses also show what species of fish they were fishing and the numbers of days spent at sea.

An extended amnesty on providing such proof has been offered to smaller vessels. But there are 17 larger boats that have been unable to provide the evidence required and those who were granted access complain that additional conditions were set on securing the licences.

'null and void'

Those extra conditions were that dredgers could have only 12 lines coming off them and that the vessels respected the closure of the bream nesting areas for a small period of time to allow scientific research to be undertaken. The French government said those conditions were "null and void" claiming they were "were not arranged or discussed" with them. The European Commission has also said that the conditions are in breach of the trade and cooperation agreement.

Matters came to a head when the UK got wind of plans for 60 French boats, most of them dredgers and trawlers, to sail to St Helier, Jersey's main port, at dawn on Wednesday. To prevent a blockade, Johnson dispatched two armed Royal Navy boats. France sent two military patrol vessels to "accompany" and "guarantee the safety" of its fishing boats.

When the French boats arrived, some crews set off smoke flares as HMS Severn and HMS Tamar kept watch nearby.

French trawlermen decided to end their protest as a result of discussions with the Jersey government. However, both sides warned that the fundamental dispute had not been resolved.

The French vessels amassed around St Helier but did not attempt a blockade and retreated towards France by the early afternoon. The waters near the port were largely clear of vessels by 1.50pm.

Josh Dearing, 28, a Jersey fisherman, said the scene had been "like an invasion", adding: "The French being the French, they don't mess around. They can blockade their own harbours - they wouldn't think twice about coming and doing it to us."

Sean Murphy, landlord of the Lamplighter pub, yards from the harbour at St Helier, said all his customers were talking about the protest, adding: "Most people are smiling about it, to be honest, and can't believe it has gone this far. We've got the Royal Navy here, the French navy on its way.

Everybody is waiting for the nuclear submarines to come next.

"I'm being tongue-in-cheek, but we're 100 per cent behind our fishermen. The way the French are behaving is despicable. They've been well looked after over the years and because they can't get their way they have thrown their dummies out of the pram again."

The Dean of Jersey, the Very Rev Michael Keirle, said: "There is inevitably some concern that Brexit has found a front line in Jersey. I'm not sure people need reassuring, but there is obviously concern that this has found its way to our shores and the impact of Brexit is playing itself out within a community that didn't even get to vote for it."

Stop veteran 'witch hunt' ministers urged

MINISTERS were this week urged to "stop the witchhunt" against veterans as two former paratroopers were acquitted of the murder of an IRA gunman 50 years ago.

The two men, in their 70s, who served in Northern Ireland during the Troubles, this week walked free from court after five years of hell.

Admiral Lord West a former head of the Royal Navy, said: "It is time to stop the cruel hounding of our veterans.

"We need to draw a line under it now."

The two elderly NI veterans, one of whom had suffered a stroke, were charged over the shooting of Ireland's most-wanted terrorist Joe McCann in Belfast in 1972.

After his death, the Official IRA said he had killed 15 British soldiers.

Judge Mr Justice O'Hara ruled on Friday that statements Soldiers A and C gave at the time were inadmissible as evidence.

The prosecution on Wednesday decided not to appeal his decision, leading to the acquittal of the elderly pair, who are in their 70s and cannot be named for their safety.

The ruling was hailed as just, but there was intense anger at the decision to pursue the two veterans all the way cont. on page 3, col. 1

PC Tasered ex-Villa star and 'kicked his head like football', murder trial told

A POLICE officer Tasered a former Premier League star six times longer than normal before kicking his head like a football, a court heard this week.

PC Benjamin Monk, 42, is charged with the murder and manslaughter of ex-Aston Villa striker Dalian Atkinson in 2016, which he denies.

Birmingham Crown Court heard he pressed the Taser's trigger for 33 seconds instead of the standard five, and booted him in the forehead, leaving an imprint of his shoelaces.

On the first day of his trial PC Monk appeared alongside his colleague PC Mary Ellen Bettley-Smith, 31.

She is charged with assaulting Mr Atkinson, who had serious health issues, occasioning actual bodily harm.

She has also pleaded not guilty.

The court heard the West Mercia Police officers were "in a relationship" at the time of the alleged killing.

Mr Atkinson, 48, had played for a number of clubs, including Sheffield Wednesday and Ipswich Town, but retired from the game in 2001.

'bizarre'

Alexandra Healy QC, prosecuting, told how the star had gone to his father's home in Telford, Shropshire, in August 2016. His behaviour was "disturbed and erratic" and he was shouting in the street. One concerned neighbour alerted police and the two officers arrived. PC Monk had a Taser with three cartridges and PC Bettley-Smith had an extendable baton.

Ms Healy said the former footballer came to the door unarmed "but his behaviour was bizarre and erratic. He said he was the Messiah".

Shortly afterwards PC Monk tried to Taser him. The first two attempts were ineffective, she added. But there was a third confrontation while all three were standing in the road.

"As Dalian Atkinson

ATKINSON: the court heard the former footballer's behaviour was 'disturbed and erratic' moved towards the officers, PC Monk fired the third Taser cartridge at him.

"This deployment was completely effective, and it caused Mr Atkinson neuro-muscular incapacitation. His muscles were overcome, and he fell forward on to the road."

'angry'

She said the default setting was five seconds. "But it is possible to override that by continuing to depress the trigger and PC Monk continued to depress the trigger for more than six times the length of a standard phase. The Taser was deployed for 33 seconds."

PC Monk also kicked out. "At least two kicks were delivered by him to Dalian Atkinson's forehead with enough force to leave the imprints of the pattern of the laces from the top of his boot on two separate areas. PC Bettley-Smith struck Mr Atkinson while he was lying on the ground a number of times with her baton."

They were not acting in self-defence but were "angry" to have been "put in fear by this man", she said. The court heard a number of residents who saw the attack said it was "quite ferocious".

One resident said they saw the male officer's leg go straight back and snap forwards like "kicking a football".

Another said they were "kicking the ****" out of him, estimating they hit him 15 times, despite no longer posing any threat. Mr Atkinson died in hospital the same morning.

He had been suffering high blood pressure, heart disease and end-stage renal failure. The officers claim he was trying to get up and they feared for their safety.

The case continues.

Veterans:

to a criminal trial.

Admiral Lord West added: "It seems a travesty in Northern Ireland that terrorists who have committed terrible atrocities are not pursued, yet ageing servicemen who were doing their best to do their duty are reinvestigated again and again.

"These events were so long ago, it ceases to make sense." The Government made a promise in their manifesto that they would do something about this.

"While they have done something about overseas operations, they have not done anything about Northern Ireland.

Slammed

"These men have been put under terrible pressure and that is not the way to continue. We have got to do something about it."

Legal experts have also slammed the proceedings.

Hilary Meredith, chairman of Hilary Meredith Solicitors, said: "This trial should never have taken place.

"The Government should hang its head in shame. Where is the legislation to protect our veterans who served in Northern Ireland? This witchhunt needs to stop right now."

The senior partner at Devonshires who represented Soldiers A and C, Philip Barden, demanded an independent inquiry to investigate whether the decision to prosecute was "political".

Mr Barden said: "The stress of these proceedings on the soldiers and their families cannot be underestimated.

"For the last five years, the soldiers have fought hard to maintain their anonymity on the basis that they would face real and imminent risk to their lives and physical safety from terrorists, were their names to be published.

"I call for an inquiry by a senior judge to investigate the decision-making process and to ensure that the decision to prosecute these veterans was not political."

'appalling'

The Public Prosecution Service of Northern Ireland hinted the case's collapse could affect the trials of other veterans over so-called "legacy" killings from the Troubles. Mr McCann was shot after resisting arrest by a plain-clothed policeman. he was unarmed at the time. his daughter Aine said: "The judge was right when he used the word appalling to describe the failure of the state at all levels in relation to the murder of Joe McCann.

"The criminal justice failed, not only in this case but in the case of many other families."

Timeless: George Michael

George Michael is still sweet music to British ears

KEEP the faith... George Michael is still top of the pops with music fans.

The Eighties crooner's classic heartbreaker Careless Whisper has topped a radio chart for the third year running.

The 1984 hit was again crowned best loved song in Smooth Radio's annual All Time Top 500.

Its resurgent fortunes were put down to featuring in 210,000 clips on social media platform TikTok.

most popular

George was also named the nation's most popular artist, with 17 songs in the top 500. His old pal Sir Elton John's 16 entries makes him the station's second favourite singer. Whitney Houston was in third spot and the top-ranked female artist. Abba beat the Bee Gees as top band.

Smooth presenter Jenni Falconer said: "In an unprecedented year, the popularity of timeless familiar songs remains ever strong, as people turn to the music they know and love."

George, 53, died at his home in Goring-On-Thames on Christmas Day in 2016. A post-mortem attributed the death to natural causes as the result of a dilated cardiomyopathy with myocarditis and a fatty liver.

14 years on, McCanns declare: We still hope to see Maddie again

ADELEINE McCann's parents say they still hope one day to be reunited with her as they marked the 14th anniversary of her disappearance this week.

In just a few days, on May 12, there will be another painful date too – her 18th birthday.

But Kate and Gerry tried to stay upbeat as they posted an online message to their supporters on the Find Madeleine website and Facebook page.

"This year it is particularly poignant as we should be celebrating Madeleine's 18th birthday. Enough said.

"As we have said repeatedly, we need to know what has happened to our lovely daughter, no matter what. We are very grateful to the police for their continued efforts.

"We hang on to the hope, however small, that we will see Madeleine again."

'truly grateful'

The couple from Rothley, Leics, added: "We still receive so many positive words and good wishes despite the years that have gone by. It all helps and for that we are truly grateful – thank you."

Their post was accompanied by a picture of their daughter with the words: "Thank you for not giving up on Madeleine." An outdoor prayer gathering to apartment in Portugal's Praia da Luz on May 3, 2007. UK police have requested funding to carry on the £12.5million search for her.

Meghan publishes book based on Archie and Harry

THE Duchess of Sussex is publishing a children's book based on the relationship between Prince Harry and Archie, who turned two on Friday.

Called The Bench, the tale is about the special bond between a father and son – as seen through a mother's eyes.

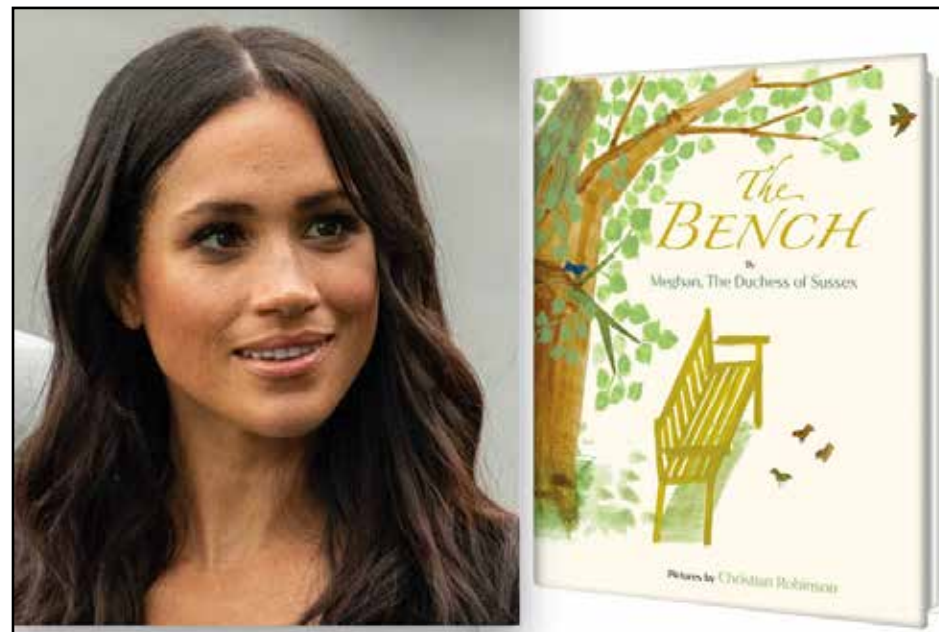

It will go on sale on June 8 and features illustrations by award-winning artist Christian Robinson.

An audiobook version, narrated by Meghan, will also be available.

The Duchess, who was 39 this week and is expecting a daughter in the summer, said: "The Bench started as a poem I wrote for my husband on Father's Day, the month after Archie was born. That poem became this story.

'joy and comfort'

"Christian layered in beautiful and ethereal watercolour illustrations

Meghan's The Bench focuses on the special bond between a father and son that capture the warmth, joy and comfort of the relationship between fathers and sons from all walks of life; this representation was particularly important to me, and Christian and I worked closely to depict this special bond through an inclusive lens. My hope is that The Bench resonates with every family, no matter the make-up, as much as it does with mine."

According to Random House, which is publishing the book, right, it is a story that "touchingly captures the evolving and expanding relationship between fathers and sons and reminds us of the many ways that love can take shape and be expressed in a modern family".

In one illustration, a ginger-haired soldier in army fatigues is seen holding his young son aloft as a woman watches on crying from a window.

'tears of joy'

It is a likely reference to Harry, who served in Afghanistan with the Blues and Royals. The accompanying words read: "And here in the window. I'll have tears of joy..."

Author Meghan is described as "a mother, wife, feminist, and activist" who "currently resides in her home state of California with her family, two dogs, and a growing flock of rescue chickens".

The cover of the book features hens by a bench under a tree.

It was revealed in Meghan and Harry's interview in March with Oprah Winfrey, that they have a chicken coop called the "Chick Inn", which is one of Archie's favourite places.

It is not known if any proceeds from the book will go to charity. Meghan follows in the footsteps of Sarah, the Duchess of York and Princess Michael of Kent, who have also written children's books.

That's one way to earn a crust, George

■ Superstar links up with Bolton bakers for new ad campaign

FANS who think George Clooney is the best thing since sliced bread are in for a treat because the Hollywood A-lister is the latest in a line of celebrities to front Bolton bakers Warburtons' latest ad campaign.

The star, who turned 60 on Thursday, will be seen alongside bakery boss Jonathan Warburton in the minute-long clip which will air on ITV on Saturday.

The advert sees company chairman Warburton eagerly anticipating a slice of thick sliced white toast for high tea.

After patiently waiting for his toast, he lovingly slashes it in butter and is about to take a bite when his office door bursts open and his secretary announces, "George Clooney is on the line".

The camera pans to Clooney on Warburton's laptop calling, "Mr Warburton? Johnnie?" as he waits to pitch an idea. But the Ocean's Eleven star is left dumbfounded when he is snubbed for the piece of toast as Warburton slowly closes the laptop, takes a bite of his toast and declares: "He can wait."

Clooney can be heard saying: "He hung up?" and then the action cuts to a posh vaulted-ceiling dining room where the actor is still staring in disbelief into the laptop and saying, "No, he's not there, he's making toast."

Clooney, of course, is no stranger to grocery adverts having done a long campaign for Nespresso, bringing more than 50 million views to the coffee producer on YouTube.

He is the latest in a string of celebrity signings for Warburtons which have included Sylvester Stallone, Robert De Niro, The Muppets as well as Bolton-born comedian Peter Kay.

In 2019, two-time Oscar winner De Niro played an amalgam of his gangster film characters as he and his accomplices attempted to thwart Warburtons bagel sales in favour of their New York products.

He followed in the footsteps of Stallone, whose 2015 campaign, The Deliverers, featured a hilarious parody of some of his most famous film scenes from The Expendables and Rocky.

Talking about his appearance in the advert, Clooney said: "It's not every day your call is turned down for a slice of toast, but needless to say I had a lot of fun filming this spot."

"It was great working with the Warburtons team and I'm thankful for the support they are providing to the Clooney Foundation For Justice."

The star doesn't need the ads to earn a crust. The fee paid to George for his participation in the campaign was donated to the foundation that fighters civil rights abuse.

It was founded by the actor and his wife, the international human rights lawyer Amal, 43. The couple and their three-year-old twins Alexander and Ella have spent the pandemic together in their home in Sonning, Berkshire.

Jonathan Warburton said: "We are thrilled to have George Clooney star in our latest campaign."

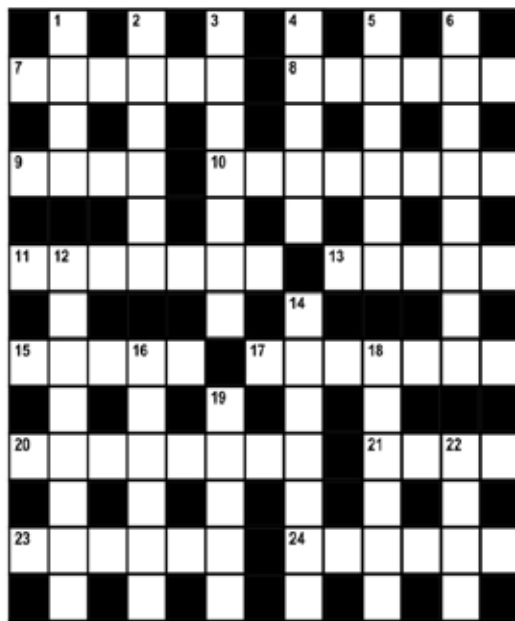

"Video calls have become part of normal life for so many of us during the last year, but George Clooney popping up on screen was quite a surprise!"

"At Warburtons, we pride ourselves on the care that goes into making sure that every single loaf is as fresh and high quality as possible."

Brits in LA

Covid is no joke...or is it?

Christine Peake shares how she went from Manchester to Maisel...sort of I've not been doing much during lockdown so I've been reaching out to fellow Brits in LA members who have.

This week I want to share the impressive story of Christine Peake - many of you may know of her through her work as a publicist and guest contributor to our column here - but when lockdown 2020 began she got given an unexpected break - the PR work may have been put temporarily on hold but this allowed her funny side to finally take a front seat.

Over the years I've met many people who have either dabbled in stand up comedy or have turned it into a career. One thing they all say (whether they made it or not) is that it's one of the most challenging things they have ever done. So hats off to Christine for not only giving it a go, but for also being invited back to do it again and saying Yes!

Before I hand over to Christine I would like to put a call out to all of you to share your stories with us all.

Have you too discovered a passion during lockdown or turned a hobby into a business? It doesn't necessarily have to be something fancy or glamorous... email me at eileen@britsin.la and I will try and help you tell your story too.

Make sure to follow us on social media for all of the latest news and updates.

Cheers!

Eileen

As we all carefully prepare to emerge out of the pandemic, like mask wearing, vaccinated, stealth ninjas, we are all changed. Not because of Covid-19 or the Covid -15 weight gain people shared with their photos of the gluten free pancakes. Are half the population now chefs?

We are changed because the world is changed.

There are no instagram pancakes to make my stomach grow, just butterflies in my stomach, not the touchy feely kind. No, I grew up in Bury-Manchester, touchy-feely is a smack on the head. I had the good old-fashioned anxiety kind of butterflies.

I decided to do stand up comedy during Covid. To be honest I had decided to do stand up comedy in 1988, 33 years ago, after a comedian picked on me in London and asked, "Are you a virgin?"

"No!" I snapped back "but I bet you are!"

My wine induced confidence was awoken. The audience laughed and I privately thought, maybe I would do that some day? I was funnier than this wanker, that's for sure.

death and loss

I would do it. Just not that century apparently.

Most people know me as a Type A publicist, a job I love and have had for 15 years, after being a single mother, to my son, Oliver - yes, he is an actual chef.

Irony.

So, how did I get here?

SHE MADE ME DO IT: Christine Peake (left) with Eugenia Kuzmina

Death and loss have played a part in my life. The loss of Oliver's father many years ago, the recent loss of my best friend Andre Cohen, a red carpet photographer who was the daily voice at the end of the phone.

Andre told me to love myself, don't be afraid and make myself "my first client." Cancer came for him and ripped his hand from the clutches of mine. I decided to stop privately drinking the sadness away and would be the best version of myself, after all, I had my other best friend of 30 years, a reliable loyal angel, Lisa Lent. Cancer came suddenly again, it took her.

F*#K cancer.

Someone said comics are depressed, well that last paragraph confirms it! So...

As the world came to a grinding halt, and Covid gained speed, we all LOST. We lost family, friends, jobs, our homes and the freedom that we had taken for granted. But I FOUND something else. An attitude that screamed from within, "What else is there to lose?" As John Lennon said, "Life is what happens when you are busy making other plans."

'do the work'

My friend and client, actress and stand up comedian Eugenia Kuzmina, invited me to her comedy set which was part of The Shindig Show, produced by the hilarious Jimmy Shin from Amazon's 'Wok Of Fame'. As I watched the comics bravely perform in a covid-restricted environment - the amphitheater of a church, I thought about the show in 1988 and how big my hair and earrings had been then.

After the show, Eugenia introduced to me Jimmy as her publicist and she told him I was funny.

I stood there trying to think of something funny.

Jimmy invited me to participate in one of his online classes and as a result we ended up producing a fundraiser comedy event to raise awareness for prostate cancer at Tiato Restaurant, in Santa Monica. He rightly predicted that one day I might want to be IN an actual show; I then dropped the bomb, I wanted to be in THIS show, not just PR the event.

"Do the work," he said. "Rehearse, write your set, commit. Then rehearse again, learn it and we shall see."

I did what he asked.

That first show

included comedy greats such as Entourage star Jeremy Piven and one of my favorite stand-up comedians, Kirk Fox.

An hour before the show I had a total breakdown, stage fright is real. I suffer from it.

Badly. But I got up and I did it.

The Shindig show was a success and all my friends came to support. They had to, I had bullied and begged them to do so.

"You were funny", they said. They had laughed throughout, they said.

My second show was a virtual show hosted by seasoned comic Jessica Winther and produced by Mark Klaber. Virtual comedy, is tough.

Jessica remembered me from that virtual show and called me for her next big sold out show at The Comedy Chateau, along with the awesome Willie Macc. Being the newbie I opened the show. 18 minutes! I ran way over - apparently a big no-no in comedy.

The audience laughed, I had been funny. Again. I now had the bug!

Then, the original gangsta of my comedy life, Jimmy Shin put me in another show, I was back with Jeremy Piven again (!) and SNL legend, Darrell Hammond. "Wow. It doesn't get any better than this!" I thought.

But it did get better. A week later, Jimmy called me and told me to "Sit down." He had news...I

He had chosen me to perform along with one of the greats. America's number one comic, Bill Burr - who was on my bucket list, along with Max Amini, SNL legend Darrell Hammond (again) and Dean Delray! The night prior I had my now familiar nervous breakdown.

I woke up at 4am and wrote jokes. I do this often, then I fall back asleep. It's my process.

Last Friday I walked on stage wearing one of my signature Title Of Work ties, I wear a tie on stage every show, I think it makes me feel strong or maybe, I am just stuck in the 90's? During my set, I talked cancel culture, joked about British parenting, tried to understand pronouns and made fun of being single and looking like a "Nazi Lesbian". Apparently, I offended a lesbian, but she didn't seem to mind the Nazi part?

I walked off stage proudly and then sneaked in to the bathroom and shed a tear in relief and thanked God, I had after all seen rappers do this at the Grammys - a lot. I thanked Jerry for my son, Andre for the support and I thanked Lisa for her loyalty. Maybe they were laughing in heaven together?

Then I went back out and watched the master Bill Burr and all the other comedians share their humor and selfless energy to make others laugh.

So I thank them all- I am also thankful I watched 'The Marvelous Mrs Maisel' instead of posting food photos.

I currently have shows booked in Las Vegas, Chicago and Los Angeles. My next show is on May 15th at The Comedy Chateau. Get your tickets as: tinyurl.com/ChristineComedy.

If anyone has any stage fright tips please let me know by 7.45pm on May 15th! Let's keep laughing.

Europa League: United do enough to book final berth

Manchester United reached their first final of the Ole Gunnar Solskjaer era but lost their seven-match unbeaten record in an entertaining Europa League last-four tie with Roma on Thursday.

Edinson Cavani scored both United goals in the second leg of a 13-goal semi-final.

The Uruguayan opened the scoring with a fabulous first-half effort, then found the

Edinson Cavani: empathic opener for United net with a fine header excellent floated pass in from Bruno Fernandes' the second half.

In between, Roma briefly threatened a comeback when former Manchester City forward Edin Dzeko scored his ninth goal against United before Bryan Cristante finished smartly with a shot on the turn.

The Italians had the final word when Nicola Zalewski's low drive went in through David de Gea's legs after taking a deflection off Alex Telles.

The 8-5 aggregate victory ends a run of four semi-final defeats for United under Solskjaer and sets up a meeting with Villarreal in Gdansk on 26 May.

United are without a trophy since their last triumph in this competition in 2017, their longest run since the five-year gap between 1985 and 1990, which was ended by an FA Cup success that marked the start of Sir Alex Ferguson's silverware collection.

Jose Mourinho was manager for that most recent United success and he will be responsible for reviving Roma's fortunes next season, knowing their only chance of European football next season will come in Uefa's new third-tier Conference competition.

Toothless Arsenal fall short

Arsenal's Europa League hopes were dashed as Villarreal sealed a semi-final victory that will almost certainly end the Gunners' unbroken 25-season run of appearing in European competition.

Trailing 2-1 from the first leg in Spain and knowing that victory in this tournament represented their only realistic route back into the Champions League, Mikel Arteta's side could not find a way past the visitors' stubborn defence.

Pierre-Emerick Aubameyang struck the post with a volley but it was a rare moment of threat in a display strangely passive for large parts.

Nicolas Pepe and Emile Smith Rowe both fired efforts wide early in the second half and Aubameyang hit the post again with a downward header later in the game, but such moments were few and far between.

That the defeat came at the hands of former boss Unai Emery will be especially galling for the Gunners. Emery was sacked in November 2019 after 18 months in charge, ultimately leading to the appointment of Arteta.

Villarreal will face United in Gdansk's Stadion Miejski on 26 May.

Manchester City reached their first Champions League final as they overcame Paris St-Germain at Etihad Stadium to secure a commanding victory over two legs.

In a game played in unseasonal snow on Tuesday night, the brilliant Riyad Mahrez capped a sweeping move started by goalkeeper Ederson's 60-yard pass to extend their 2-1 advantage from the first leg in Paris.

PSG suffered a serious blow before kick-off when world-class forward Kylian Mbappe was restricted to the bench because of injury. They did not lack endeavour or intent and had early hope when a penalty was awarded for a handball by Oleksandr Zinchenko before it was correctly overturned, but with Neymar subdued and City throwing bodies on the line in defence, Mauricio Pochettino's side could not find a way through.

Mahrez punished them again just after the hour when he turned in Phil Foden's cross at the far post to effectively end the contest.

PSG, as they did when Idrissa Gueye was sent off late in the first leg, lost their discipline and Angel di Maria was shown a red card for a senseless stamp on Fernandinho following a touchline tangle.

City were in full control, avoiding further mishap to set up the Champions League final they and manager Pep Guardiola have craved, against Chelsea in Istanbul on 29 May.

Manchester City manager Pep Guardiola said: "I'm incredibly proud and my first thoughts are with the players who didn't play today. They all deserved

Chelsea will face Manchester City in the Champions League final in Istanbul after convincingly overcoming a fading Real Madrid at Stamford Bridge on Wednesday night.

On a night of high tension, even behind closed doors, Chelsea fully deserved a victory that sets up an all-English final against Pep Guardiola's Premier League leaders on 29 May.

Thomas Tuchel's hosts were grateful to goalkeeper Edouard

Mendy for two fine first-half saves from Karim Benzema but they were able to build on the 1-1 draw they achieved in Madrid when Timo Werner headed in from almost on the goal-line in the 28th minute after Kai Havertz had lofted a finish on to the bar.

It set the platform for a second half of total Chelsea domination that was nevertheless laced with anxiety as the hosts missed chance after chance to put the game to bed.

Real's former Chelsea goalkeeper Thibaut Courtois saved from N'golo Kante and Havertz, who also headed against the bar, while Mason Mount shot wildly over the top when clean through.

It was Mount, though, who finally sealed Chelsea's place in their first Champions League final since they won the competition in 2012.

The outstanding Kante, who was also instrumental in the opening goal, fed substitute Christian Pulisic and his cross was turned in by Mount with five minutes left.

The result adds another chapter to the remarkable transformation under Tuchel since he succeeded the sacked Frank Lampard in January - and gives him the chance to make amends for the 2020 Champions League final, when his Paris St-Germain side lost to Bayern Munich.
