Quarantine to be lifted for fully vaccinated visitors from EU and US

■ Change comes into force Monday

■ Travel industry welcomes news

People who have been fully vaccinated in the EU or US will not need to isolate when coming to England from an amber list country.

The change will come into force at 04:00 BST on Monday.

Currently, only people who received their jabs in the UK can avoid quarantine when arriving from amber list countries, except France.

The government said the rule change would help to reunite family and friends whose loved ones live abroad.

Transport Secretary Grant Shapps said it would apply to people who have been fully vaccinated with a jab approved by the EU or

isolation

Travellers will still need to take a Covid test pre-departure and a PCR test on the second day after they arrive.

Under-18s will be exempt from isolation, and some will not have to test, depending on their age.

It comes as a further 27,734 cases were reported in the UK, bringing to an end a seven-day run of falling case numbers. Wednesday's case figure was, however, down significantly from a week ago, when 44,104 cases were reported.

Another 91 deaths within 28 days of a positive test were also reported.

Tougher rules will continue to be in place for France, which is on the amber list but still requires travellers to quarantine when they return, even if they are fully vaccinated.

Mr Shapps said this advice would reviewed at "the end of next week" as part of the rolling assessment of travel rules

CROWDS AHEAD: the travel industry expects the change to prompt a surge of tourists into the UK

As well as reopening to the EU and the US, international cruises will also be allowed to restart from England.

'lifeline'

It is not yet known whether pt the same changes. The Scottish government said no decision had been made.

Welsh First Minister Mark Drakeford said Wales would reflect the changes, subject to more information about how approved jabs would be verified.

The travel industry has long been pushing for this change in a bid to make it easier for tourists or expats to visit.

Airlines UK, which represents big carriers, said the move would offer "a lifeline for thousands of businesses reliant on international inbound travel".

Joss Croft, of trade association UKinbound, said it would "allow the £28bn inbound tourism sector, which supports over 500,000 jobs across the UK, to finally restart".

travel corridor

Although US citizens will soon be able to avoid quarantine in England, they are being urged not to travel to the UK by their country's health protection agency, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

And the US border is currently closed to the UK, as well as many other countries, except for US citizens.

The UK and US have set up a taskforce to discuss a travel corridor, although earlier this week the White House said it had no plans to lift Covid-19 travel restrictions for non-Americans.

But Prime Minister Boris Johnson told LBC on Wednesday that "we're talking to them the whole time".

Pandemic 'could be over by October'

"We're not completely out of the woods, but the equation has fundamentally changed,"- leading epidemiologist Professor Neil Ferguson.

BRITAIN'S Covid pandemic could be over by October and effectively no longer a major threat to our way of life.

That was the bold prediction by Imperial College epidemiologist and government adviser Professor Neil Ferguson.

In his most upbeat assessment since the crisis erupted in March last year, Prof Ferguson said: "We're not completely out of the woods, but the equation has fundamentally changed. The effect of vaccines is hugely reducing the risk of hospitalizations and death.

"I'm positive that by late September, October time, we will be looking back at most of the pandemic.

respected

"We'll still have Covid with us, we'll still have people dying from Covid, but we will put the bulk of the pandemic behind us."

Prof Ferguson, member of the respected Advisory Group for Emergencies, and known as "Professor Lockdown" because his expertise led Britain into isolation in March last year, believes cases are "plateauing".

That is largely thanks to the country's worldleading vaccination rollout, which started on December 8 – less than a year after the world was crippled by the respiratory virus.

More than 37 million people in the UK have received both doses of a Covid jab.

Prof Ferguson's view is a dramatic change in his stance. Just 10 days ago he was warning it was "almost inevitable" Covid cases would hit 100,000 per day.

The Prime Minister this week warned against drawing "premature conclusions" about the dramatic drop in cases.

But Prof Karol Sikora, a former director of World Health Organisation, said: "If we're being honest, nobody knows why cases are falling so precipitously.

"Schools breaking up, the warmer weather, the 'pingdemic', immunity in the population - it's probably a mix of all of these factors.

"Whatever the reason, it's good news.

"Prof Ferguson is absolutely right. Vaccines have severely weakened the link between cases hospitalisations, though not completely broken.

"Deaths will sadly continue, but not anywhere near the levels we have experienced.

"We should now focus on the non-Covid health crisis and the enormous amount of suffering that is causing."

In Scotland, numbers started falling sooner than in England, with some evidence the decline may have been triggered by the national team's earlier exit from Euro 2020. The downward trend has continued since.

Mark Woodhouse, professor of infectious epidemiology disease the University Edinburgh, "There has been a lot of conversation about a football-related bounce in infections. In Scotland though it's now starting to look like it's a longerterm trend. We haven't seen any sign of cases picking up [since the games finished]".

Office for National Statistics data suggests 92 per cent of adults have antibodies, either through infection or at least one vaccine dose.

Pfizer One AstraZeneca vaccine shot is around 35 per cent effective at preventing with infection dominant Delta variant.

With two shots it rises to 88 per cent for Pfizer and 67 per cent for AstraZeneca. Both jabs are even more effective against hospitalisation and death. Inoculation cannot offer 100 per cent protection but as more of the population is jabbed there is less opportunity for the virus to infect and spread.

As of July 22 there were 5,001 Covid patients in hospital, up from a low of 871 on May 27 but still well below the 39,254 at the height of the winter wave in January.

Latest data shows 46,653,796 people have received a first jab, some 88.2 per cent of the adult population, while 37,459,060 have had both shots - 70.8 per cent of the population.

Prof James Naismith, director of the Rosalind Franklin Institute for medical research, said: "The rollout of vaccines in the UK has clearly made a huge difference to hospitalisations and deaths. The warmer summer days have also helped.

Recent weeks have seen a real drop in the number of first vaccinations.

"I would urge the Government, medics and my fellow scientists to continue to explain to the 'vaccine hesitant' the benefits of these safe and effective medicines.'

Quick out the blocks: Team GB make best-ever start to Olympics

■ Swimmers and divers grab gold in Tokyo

THE BRITISH Olympic team shot out of the blocks like a rocket in Tokyo this week, with a sensational one-two of a swimming gold and silver in the men's 200m freestyle capping the most successful start to an Olympics in British history.

Tom Dean, 21, was crowned champion, claiming Team GB's fifth gold medal of the Games on Tuesday despite suffering two bouts of Covid in the past 12 months.

And he was pushed all the way by his close friend and roommate Duncan Scott, 24, who took silver after a brilliant race for the line. He finished in one minute and 44.22 seconds, ahead of Duncan by just 0.04 seconds.

It was the first time the British team had taken a gold and silver in the same Olympic swim for 113 years.

"Magic Monday"

In touching scenes at the end of the race, Tom looked up at the scoreboard in disbelief as he saw the result confirmed then immediately reached out for Duncan. Back in Maidenhead, Berks, footage of Tom's family and friends jumping for joy in his back garden in the middle of the night went viral. Within hours, the video had been viewed more than one million times after it appeared on breakfast TV and the Team GB website.

This came on the heels of what the British media dubbed "Magic Monday" as the team snagged three golds and two silvers.

Adam Peaty ha

kicked off a gold rush at the Aquatic Centre as he made history as the first British swimmer to retain an Olympic title in the 100m breaststroke.

The 26-year-old punched the water in jubilation as he clocked the fifth-fastest time ever Games days since Super Saturday at London 2012 – when six golds were won in one day, three in just 44 minutes on the track.

Tom, nicknamed "Tigger" by his family because he is always bouncing around, had in an event where he has been unbeaten since 2013.

Then diver Tom Daley broke down in tears after taking gold in the synchronized 10m platform event with Matty Lee, who idolised him as a child.

Tom, 27, said he had been working for this moment for 20 years, while it was a dream come true for Matty, 23, who had his picture taken with his "hero" when he was 10. The pair edged out reigning champions China – 13 years after two-time bronze medallist Tom made his Olympic debut in Beijing as a 14-year-old.

'really emotional'

He dedicated his victory to his dad Rob, who died aged 40 when he was just 17.

The third Olympic champ of the day was Yorkshireman mountain biker Tom Pidcock.

His triumph made it one of Team GB's best shown his talent on two wheels since he was little.

His mum Sonja, 53, watching with husband Giles, 54, at home in Leeds, said: "I am really emotional, delighted after all he has done to get here.

Alex Yee got the day's medal flurry under way by winning a stunning silver in the triathlon. His success follows that of former double champion Alistair Brownlee and his medal-winning sibling Jonny, who was fifth this time

Alex was still in contention for gold until Norwegian Kristian pulled Blummenfelt away in the 10km run. The 23-yearold from Lewisham, South-east London, was delighted with his Olympic debut in the multi-event, which also includes a 1.5km swim and 40km of cycling. He said: "I am just a normal guy from south-east London.

The 22-year-old, of Blackwood in Wales, held a three-point advantage with 10 seconds left but lost 25-22.

openly gay

She said: "It's been absolutely crazy, insane, my first Olympic Games. A very good experience."

Back in the pool, Daley and Lee were crying tears of joy as they stood arm in arm on the medal podium. Tom spoke of his pride in the Olympic LGBT community.

There are 160 openly gay athletes in Tokyo, more than three times the previous record of 49 in Rio.

Tom, who was born in Plymouth and now lives in London with screenwriter husband Dustin Lance Black and three-year-old son Robbie, said: "There are more openly 'out' athletes at this Olympics than any previous Games. I came out in 2013. When I was younger I always felt like I was alone and didn't fit in.

"I hope that any young LGBT person out there can see that no matter how alone you feel, you are not alone and you can achieve anything.

"I feel incredibly proud to say I am a gay man and also an Olympic champion."

In Taekwondo, three times world champion Bianca Walkden missed out on the final by just one second in a dramatic semi-final defeat but fought back later and came away with bronze.

And to cap a perfect day, 16-year-old twins Jessica and Jennifer Gadirova both won bronze in the women's team gymnastics final alongside Alice Kinsella and Amelie Morgan.

Charlotte Dujardin – also

UK 'already suffering' from disruptive climate change

The UK is already undergoing disruptive climate change with increased rainfall, sunshine and temperatures, according to scientists.

The year 2020 was the third warmest, fifth wettest and eight sunniest on record, scientists said in the latest UK State of the Climate report.

No other year is in the top 10 on all three criteria.

The experts said that, in the space of 30 years, the UK has become 0.9C warmer and 6% wetter.

The report's lead author Mike Kendon, climate information scientist at the UK Met Office, told BBC News: "A lot of people think climate change is in the future - but this proves the climate is already changing here in the UK.

"As it continues to warm we are going to see more and more extreme weather such as heatwaves and floods."

Scientists warn of worse extreme weather if global temperatures rise and politicians fail to curb carbon emissions.

Love at first bite: Postcard from Palermo

■ The Sicilian capital offers travellers an intoxicating - and delicious - blend of cultures

SICILY is a place I have long wondered about but never visited until this week, drawn by an invitation to sail on a friend's boat from the port city of Cephalu up to Sardinia.

Ι would alwavs prefer a deep dive into a destination rather than a drive-by, but with only two days from arrival to casting off the lines, I had to make do with what I could get, and opted to stay in the nearby capital, Palermo.

I flew American Airlines from LAX to JFK and from there to Rome. The Covid epidemic was still visible on transatlantic leg, with less than a quarter of the seats filled in my section, allowing me to stretch out over an entire four-seat row for a welcome snooze en route to Rome. Who needs First Class?

Arriving by Alitalia jet from Rome I was impressed by Sicily's stark, somewhat savage beauty, its steep mountains rising aggressively from the Mediterranean, which the Romans, in a grand demonstration of selfimportance, termed 'Mare Nostrum' - or 'our sea'

This place has been fought over for centuries, its strategic importance coveted by Phoenicians and Greeks who clashed over it in the 5th and 6th centuries BC. After a long period of Roman and Byzantine dominance it was invaded by successive Arab armies from the 8th century, and dubbed "Kingdom of the Sun" by invading Normans in the 12th century. It has remained a cultural melting pot, inevitable I suppose, since it sits close to where Europe ends and Africa begins. It unified with the mainland only in 1861, and my taxi driver assured me that all the locals consider themselves Sicilian first and Italian very much second.

If you like classic architecture, dilapidated buildings and a more than a hint of the Moorish, you will love this town, especially its three main markets, Capo, Vucciria Ballaro,, reminiscent of Arab souks. I found the abundance and variety of food staggering. Despite some enticing wonderfully fruit and vegetables, I was captivated by the food stalls, hawking local delicacies including fried fruitti di mare, the locally famous gambero rosso (red prawns) cooked on the grill to order, and the sublime sarde a beccafico (stuffed Sicilian sardines). In these situations I always wish I had the capacity to eat every hour, on the hour, to satisfy my curiosity. The garrulous and exuberant food stall barkers, who try to tempt every passerby with their specialties, would have loved that too, it seemed.

I stayed mostly in the pedestrianized city center surrounding Via Maqueda, marveling, tasting and drooling over other delights including the city's famed cannoli. can't beat pistachio and ricotta-filled version, washed down with a bracing jolt of the local espresso. Arancini, or creamy risotto rice balls, breaded and deep friend, - another echo of the city's Arab history, are also sold almost everywhere by storefronts and moped vendors. Given the bracing

CHICKPEAS, THREE WAYS: the Sicilians are endlessly resourceful in creating delicious dishes from the most humble of ingredients

heat (it was in the high 90s during my stay) the city's embrace of icy treats such as granita al limone and artisanal gelato was just as welcome as its spectacular seafood dining scene.

On a tip from my B&B host, night I arrived I dined at Osteria Paranza (91 Via Bara all'olivella; osterialaparanza.it) Located just down from Piazza Verdi and the local and quite magnificent opera house, Teatro Massimo. Paranza's owner greeted me like a long-lost friend (no surprise there). The tables are mainly al-fresco in a narrow alleyway which gave me a chance to enjoy a little street theater between courses, as the eatery's Bangladeshi waiter, a talented linguist, entreated everyone, in at least ten different languages, to sit down and eat.

I ordered the caponata di mare, a local appetizer of swordfish, eggplant, olives, capers and tomato, followed by a freshly caught loup de mer straight off the grill accompanied by a little verdure of zucchini and arugula. With an Aperol Spritz aperitif, two chilled glasses of the local white wine, coffee and an amaro digestif, the bill came to 40 euros, including tip. This I could get used to.

Street tours

When visiting European cities I try to make a point of using one of the local street tours soon upon arrival to get a feel for the lie of the land, the best local places to eat and drink and a sense of the local history cuisine. This has worked well in Madrid and Barcelona hitherto and Palermo was no exception. Our guide, a talkative Sicilian (is there any other kind) named Angelo from Streaty Tours, (streaty.com). welcomed myself and 11 others from countries including Italy, Austria, Holland, Canada and the US. Angelo met us at the Teatro Massimo Opera House and briefly outlined what we could expect for our three hour tour. What followed was a fascinating dive into the best of the local wines, beers, aperitifs and digestifs, and a variety of foods from local cafes including bruschetta (with bottarga, olive and ricotta), a spleen sandwich (cooked in lard and incredibly tasty), the local Sicilian pizza and even three fried dishes centered on chickpeas, a universal comfort food in these parts, alternately flattened into fritters or rolled into balls with cheese, onion and mint, then fried. The three hour tour included walking through several historic districts, bar hopping from wine bar to restaurant to working man's bar to street vendor, and ended with a stop at a superb artisanal gelato spot, by which time the eleven of us were all thoroughly lubricated and very animated.

Sadly my stop in this magical city lasted less than 48 hours before we cast off for Sardinia...of which more next week.

SIR MICK: gimme shelter for my birthday

SIR Mick Jagger proved yurt can always get what you want as he celebrated his birthday in an outdoor pod in the grounds of his castle this week.

The Rolling Stones singer turned 78 on Monday and took to Instagram (above) to say to his two million followers: "Thanks so much for all your birthday wishes," adding a red heart emoji.

Sir Mick posted a picture of himself standing next to the yurt. He wore a black and- white shirt over a black T-shirt, with green trousers.

The pod is in the herb garden of 16th century French castle La Fourchette, which he bought in 1982 for £2.2million.

Itoje urges Lions to push on against wounded Springboks

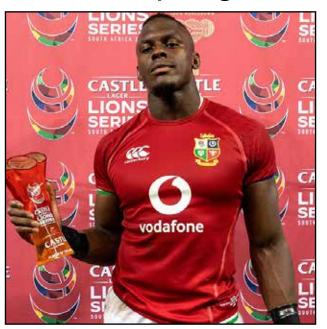

MARO ITOJE has urged the British & Irish Lions to push on and make history against the Springboks on Saturday in the face of "fire and anger" from wounded world champions.

Itoje, man of the match in the weekend's dramatic 22-17 First Test win in Cape Town, knows a Boklash is coming. But he believes the Lions, led by Alun Wyn Jones, can lift themselves to even greater heights as they look to seal a series win in South Africa for the first time in 24 years.

Itoje said: "Winning a Test match with the Lions is rare – we only play once every four years and it's unique – but this will mean nothing unless we go out and win next week. This is a great win and I'm proud to be part of this match but we know that we need to do a job next week. That's when it really counts.

"I'm a man who likes to look at history and see how other tours have unfolded.

"Looking at the 2001 Tests in Australia, the Lions won the first Test quite convincingly and then went on to lose the next two.

"There's so much growth in this team. Game by game we're getting better, we're learning lessons so I think there is more to come from us.

"We're happy but we know that we need to be better next week and stronger. The Springboks – we know they are coming."

South Africa's try scorer Faf de Klerk has warned the Lions to expect a ferocious response in the second Test but, after giving away 14 penalties on Saturday, a focused one too

"We are a proud nation and we'll definitely make sure that we rectify the mistakes we made," said De Klerk.

"We will definitely come back with a bit more fire in our belly and anger, but we need to control that anger to make sure our discipline is in check.

"If our discipline is good we should be all good going forward, but it's going to be another massive challenge next week. We like our backs against the wall, we can fight back."

and Eric Bailly down the pecking order but there are no plans to sell either. However, academy graduate Axel Tuanzebe, 23, is likely to move on loan.

Solskjaer was hoping to add a midfielder and a right-back to his summer shopping but his pursuit of Kieran Trippier looks to have stalled after Atletico Madrid put a £30m price tag on the England defender. United were hoping to pay £15m.

Solskjaer is also waiting to see if Paris Saint-Germain's interest in Paul Pogba firms up before committing to midfield options.

United have reached agreement with their own fans on the makeup and scope of a new Fan Advisory Board (FAB) and Fans' Forum.

The FAB will comprise seven senior fan representatives and up to five club executives, creating what the club call "a new channel for in-depth dialogue on fan-related issues and strategic matters".

United insist progress has also been made on the trickier issue of the creation of a share scheme which would give fans access to a new class of shares with voting rights.

Beleaguered Celtic's Champions League hopes ended in the second qualifying round for the second consecutive year as a callow side were undone in extra time by Denmark's Midtjylland on Wednesday.

Raphael Onyedika side-footed home the crucial blow three minutes into the added period after Callum McGregor's stunning volley had put Celtic in front for the second time in the tie.

But defensive frailties cost them again as Awer Mabil levelled before Onyedika pounced to leave Celtic floored and bound for the Europa League.

Charlotte Dujardin has cemented her place in the history books as the most decorated British female Olympian of all time, winning a bronze in the individual dressage – the double champion's sixth Olympic medal.

Dujardin and her horse Gio, riding together in their first Olympics, danced their way to legendary status in the grand prix freestyle at Tokyo Equestrian Park on Wednesday, with Dujardin having won gold at London 2012 and in Rio 2016 on her horse Valegro.

On Tuesday Dujardin won a record-equalling fifth Olympic medal as Great Britain took bronze in the team dressage final – with the 36-year-old joined in the team by the Olympic veteran Carl Hester, 54, and the 25-year-old newcomer Charlotte Fry, whose late mother, Laura, competed for Great Britain at the 1992 Barcelona Olympics.

Dujardin's collection of three gold medals, one silver and two bronze moves her ahead of the five medals won by the British rower Katherine Grainger and the tennis player Kathleen McKane Godfree.

"This is the single greatest achievement of my life," the 21-year-old said in a news conference after his victory in the in the men's 200-meter freestyle Tuesday. "It's amazing. It's a dream come true having a gold around my neck."
