Meghan: "I wanted to get help but I wasn't allowed to"

■ Second installment of Harry and Meghan saga lays bare the pain and acrimony of royal split

THE rift between the Duke and Duchess of Sussex and the rest of the royal family just turned into a yawning chasm.

In the most unwelcome Christmas gift imaginable for Buckingham Palace, the second and final installment of "Harry and Meghan," was released on Thursday, and it is very different in tone and focus from the first three episode tranche, focusing a harsh spotlight on the acrimonious rift within the family, and what Harry and Meghan clearly see as a callous indifference to Meghan's growing mental health issues before their 2020 decision to step back from active royal status.

Chief among eyebrow-raising moments Harry's account of 'family summit' at Sandringham in 2020 Harry where claims William yelled at him and Charles lied.

In the fifth episode, the couple recounts a family meeting to discuss their decision to reduce their roles as working members of the royal family. Harry said he was presented with several options but quickly realized no agreement would be reached and things quickly turned very acrimonious.

"It was terrifying to have my brother scream and shout at me, and my father say things that simply weren't true and my grandmother quietly sit there and sort of take it all in," Harry said.

"You have to understand that from the family's perspective, especially from her's (the Queen's), the the ultimate responsibility is to the institution."

In the fourth episode, Meghan discusses suicidal thoughts that she blamed, in part, on negative headlines shortly after they wed and during much of her first pregnancy.

The Duchess claims that when she asked to seek professional help for the issue, he was not allowed

"I wanted to get help but I wasn't allowed to they were concerned about how it would look for the institution."

Of her suicidal thoughts, she added: "All of this will stop if I'm not here, and that was the scariest thing about it - it was such clear thinking," Meghan said, Doria Ragland, Meghan's mother, recalled emotional conversation in which Meghan expressed suicidal thoughts. "That's not an easy one for a mom to hear," she said, wiping away tears. "And I can't protect her. H can't protect

"I had been trained to worry more about what are people going to think,"

"And looking back at it now, I hate myself for it. What she needed from me was so much more than I was able to give."

To make matters worse, Harry and William were increasingly growing distant due to what Harry perceived as his brother's office privately briefing selected members of the press against him and Meghan.

William claims this was especially painful to him because as children the brothers had vowed to each other never to do this, because they had seen just how completely it had poisoned relations between their parents.

The headlines at that time appeared to be incessant, allegedly pushing the couple to a breaking point.

"I realized that I wasn't just being thrown to the wolves," Meghan said. "I was being fed to the wolves."

Harry said grandmother, the queen, was aware that he and Meghan were having difficulties with their public roles and made plans to discuss it in early January 2020 when he returned briefly to Britain. However, that plan was thwarted, they said.

I've got a plan to stop 'em coming, insists Sunak

■ "It is not cruel or unkind to want to break the stranglehold of the criminal gangs who trade in human misery..."

Rishi Sunak insisted "enough is enough" this week as he laid out tough plans to stop migrants illegally entering the country.

The Prime Minister vowed to turn away Albanians more swiftly, clear the backlog of asylum claims by the end of next year and make the Rwanda deportation plan work.

He also promised to end the use of hotels to house asylum seekers at a cost to taxpayers of £5.5million a day by switching to disused holiday parks, former student halls and unoccupied military sites.

And a small boats operational command unit, which he visited at its central London base yesterday, will consist of military, civilian staff and the National Crime Agency to target stopping crossings.

Mr Sunak insisted the crackdown is about "fairness" and admitted the public is right to be angry about exploitation of the system.

He said: "It is unfair people come here illegally. "It is unfair on those with a genuine case for asylum when our capacity to help is taken up by people coming through, and from, countries that are perfectly safe.

"Above all, it is unfair on the British people who play by the rules, when others come here illegally and benefit from breaking rules. So people are right to be angry because they see what I see, which is that this simply isn't fair.

"It is not cruel or unkind to want to break the stranglehold of the criminal gangs who trade in human misery and who exploit our system and law. Enough is enough."

modern slavery?

A judicial review on the Government's plans to deport illegal migrants to Rwanda is expected before Christmas but no date has been confirmed.

The number of Albanians, mainly young men, heading to the UK illegally has surged over the past two years and the nationality accounts for 35 per cent of arrivals compared with three per cent in 2021.

Under the reforms,

Border Force officers will be stationed at Tirana airport in the Albanian capital.

Most Albanians claim they were victims of modern slavery but will now need to have evidence to back this up.

Other European nations return almost all Albanians arriving illegally as their home nation is deemed a"safe country".

Mr Sunak told MPs 400 new specialists will work in a dedicated unit expediting asylum claims from people from the Balkan state, with plans for weekly removal flights to take people back.

The Prime Minister and Home Secretary Suella Braverman have been meeting up to three times a week for more than a month to find solutions to the growing problem.

Mr Sunak has made the small boats crisis his priority alongside restoring the country's economic fortunes. New laws will make it "unambiguously clear" that "if you enter the UK illegally you should not be able to remain here".

struggled to remove people is because they unfairly exploit our modern slavery system, so we will significantly raise the threshold someone has to meet to be considered a modern slave."

The number of

The PM added: "One of the reasons we have

The number of caseworkers will double and the asylum process will be streamlined with the aim of abolishing the backlog of initial decisions by the end of next year.

'ruthless criminals'

Raids on illegal working will increase by 50 per cent and data sharing will be restarted to end the "absurd" situation where "illegal migrants" can get bank accounts.

Mr Sunak told MPs: "No one can doubt our generosity of spirit but far too many of the beneficiaries of that generosity are not those directly fleeing war zones or at risk of persecution, but people crossing the Channel in small boats. "Many originate

GETTING TOUGH? Rishi Sunak

"Many originate from fundamentally safe countries or travel through safe countries.

"Their journeys are not ad hoc, but co-ordinated by ruthless organised criminals. Every journey risks the lives of women, children and – we should be honest – mostly men at sea. This is not what previous generations intended when they drafted our humanitarian laws."

Labour leader Sir Keir Starmer accused the Tories of offering "gimmicks" and not "solutions".

He said: "Time and time again this Government has not provided serious solutions. The Prime Minister sat around the Cabinet table the whole time. Where there should have been solutions, we've had unworkable gimmicks.

"As I listened to that statement – all of that has been said almost word for word before"

Conservative MP Lee Anderson argued Labour needed to "realise the vast majority coming over are not genuine asylum seekers".

He added: "I live in a place called the real world. Even last week, the Albanian ambassador admitted everybody coming from Albania are economic migrants. So the public get it, even the Albanian ambassador gets it. We all get it."

Meanwhile, the Government is being urged to test out a visa to encourage migrants to live and work in rural areas. The Migration Advisory Committee said it could help "counteract depopulation" in countryside communities.

Four dead as dinghy capsizes

FOUR migrants drowned in the Channel on Tuesday when a dinghy carrying dozens – including children – capsized after apparently getting a puncture.

Fishermen were woken at 3am by the screams of desperate people clinging to their boat in ice-cold waters.

The heroic crew saved 31 people, four youngsters among them, off Dungeness, Kent, 30 miles west of Dover.

Another 12 were rescued in what became a huge emergency operation involving British and French Navy ships, the Coastguard and

RNLI lifeboats

Scallop fisherman Ray Strachan, aboard the Arcturus, said those they helped came from Afghanistan, Iraq, Senegal and India.

He revealed: "It was like something out of a Second World War movie – there were people in the water everywhere, screaming. Adrenalin kicks in and you find the strength to get these guys safe."

Ray said he counted 45 people clinging on for life, including to the crumpled dinghy.

Ben Squire, who owns the Arcturus which had eight on board, said: "We managed to rescue 31, the rest were picked up by Coastguard or unfortunately have died or presumed missing. We took in four children from the boat. The youngest was an 11-year-old boy from Afghanistan, who was with his family.

"The other children came from Senegal and Afghanistan. All with their families as well. Those brought aboard were in various conditions. Some were critical, others were less seriously injured, who were given a hot shower, food and the crews' dry clothing.

"As I understand it, there were at least four people dead in the water."

"I remember looking at H and going, my gosh, this is when a family and family business are in direct conflict because they're blocking you from seeing the queen, but really what they're doing is blocking a grandson from seeing his grandmother," Meghan said.

Harry also places blame for Meghan's 2020 miscarriage squarely on the stress caused her by tabloid coverage.

"I believe my wife suffered a miscarriage because of what The Mail did," Harry said. "I watched the whole thing."

Meghan claimed that the newspaper had violated her privacy by publishing details from a private letter she sent to her estranged father in 2018.

"Now, do we absolutely know that the miscarriage was created, caused by that? Course we don't," he said, while noting that the legal battle led to stress and loss of sleep."

Fortunately these episodes are not just a nonstop pity party. The couple show just how happy they seem to be in California raising their children, and to appearances, still seem very much in love. By the end of the show Harry's moods shift between the sad and the regretful, the proud and the philosophical.

"The saddest part of it was this wedge created between myself and my brother so that he's now on the institution side," Harry said, acknowledging Prince William's perspective.

In the final moments of the series, Harry admits that he misses many aspects about his former life and that he has lost friends in the process of transitioning to the United States.

Reflecting on the couple's experiences, Harry says, "There's times when I've been angry, but I can't be that angry because I genuinely feel that I, and we, are exactly where we're supposed to be."

Sad journey home for Southgate's men

■ Another World Cup, another disappointment for England

ENGLAND flew home from the World Cup on Sunday after their gutwrenching elimination by reigning champions France.

The Three Lions said goodbye to staff at their Doha base camp before being bussed to the airport for a flight to Birmingham.

Gareth Southgate's squad touched down on English soil in freezing weather after spending nearly four weeks in the desert heat of Qatar.

They returned amid furious debate about Saturday's 2-1 quarterfinal loss to France following a Harry Kane penalty miss and dubious refereeing.

As the Three Lions left the luxury Souk Al Wakra hotel, the captain was among several players who did not board the bus.

'absolutely gutted'

The 29-year-old striker's whereabouts were unknown but his manager said he was feeling "very, very low" following the bungled spot-kick. After the game, Kane had tweeted: "Absolutely gutted. We've given it everything and it's come down to a small detail which I take responsibility for. There's no hiding from it, it hurts and it'll take some time to get over it but that's part of sport."

The captain had already scored one penalty to level at 1-1, but blazed his second over the bar to leave England a goal adrift with six minutes left of normal time.

The earlier strike meant Kane drew level with Wayne Rooney's national scoring record of 53 goals. And manager Southgate said: "He has got nothing to reproach himself for. He has been a fantastic leader. It is cruel for him, he will feel disappointed but he shouldn't."

The national boss praised the young players such as Jude Bellingham and Phil Foden who had "announced themselves on the world stage" with wins against Iran, Wales and Senegal, and only fell to the very best.

Southgate added: "I couldn't ask for more but tonight we have come up short. We came here thinking we could win the tournament tonight, it is really difficult.

"To lose a quarterfinal is not a lot of fun I have to say. But the way

STILL LADDISH: Jack Grealish checks out

ARM ROUND THE SHOULDER: Gareth Southgate with Kieran Trippier

the players have been is exceptional, they are such a united group.

"They showed they have the balls to go toe to toe against a good team. We have shown the rest of the world that English football is healthy."

'very upset'

The 52-year-old did not confirm whether he will continue in his role after six years, saying he needed to take time to think.

He said: "Emotionally you go through so many different feelings. The energy it takes through these tournaments is enormous."

The players appear to be right behind Southgate to stay on following three campaigns which took them to the World Cup quarter and semi-finals and the Euros final.

West Ham midfielder Declan Rice said: "I love playing under him and love playing for England. "I really hope he stays because the core group we've got and what he's made for us, it's so special to be a part of."

Brazilian referee Wilton Sampaio faced furious criticism for the way he handled France's physical style of play and ignored a succession of England penalty claims.

The official only awarded the Three Lions' second spotkick after a video review.

England defender Harry Maguire said he was "very poor", adding: "From minute one, five, six fouls in the first 15 minutes and not one yellow card. Even though the big decisions were wrong, he never gave us anything. I don't want to go into it too much because I'll end up getting fined – but it was really, really poor."

Southgate refused to discuss the referee after the final whistle, preferring to focus on his players.

But an England source said: "The players are very upset. Gareth has been telling them 'don't worry about it'.

"He has been saying there is no point in dwelling on it and they should hang on to the good memories and what they have achieved."

Former England star and Sky pundit Gary Neville said of the official: "He was awful. That's not me blaming the referee for England going out, I just thought he was awful."

Leaving their hotel barely 12 hours after the quarter-final clash, the players looked dejected as they trooped on to the team bus.

Southgate left last with a consoling arm around defender Kieran Trippier's shoulders before boarding a separate coach. However, Bellingham, 19, and one of the tournament's top performers, stopped to sign autographs and pose for selfies.

UK braces for Winter of Discontent

The UK is bracing itself for a winter of discontent as it faces the most widespread industrial action in decades.

A great wave of public and private sector strikes began this week as workers belonging to several unions for industrial action due to the dramatic rise of inflation and interest rates and pay not reflecting these economic changes. The country is to be disrupted by strikes every day until Christmas as trade unions seek to force the government to the bargaining table. Railways, postal services, schools and hospitals are among the sectors affected.

Britain's biggest rail union, the RMT, announced a month of strike action which began on Tuesday, in a move that threatens to disrupt Christmas plans for millions of people.

RMT members walked out on 13 and 14 December, and will again on 16 and 17 December, and from 6pm on 24 December until 6am on 27 December. Additionally, there will be strikes on 3, 4, 6 and 7 January. The strike dates mean rail services on Christmas Eve will wind down earlier than normal.

Mick Lynch, general secretary of the RMT, blamed the walkouts on the absence of an improved offer on jobs, pay and conditions. Speaking to BBC Radio 4 this week, he said the union does "regret the inconvenience" that the industrial action will cause, but he argued that, ultimately,

"this inconvenience is being caused by the government".

A Unite strike will also additionally impact East Midlands Railways on 23 and 24 December, while Eurostar services will be disrupted on 16, 18, 22 and 23 December due to strike action.

For those in London the majority of TfL including services, most of the Tube, will continue to run during national rail strike dates but for on the buses it is a different story. Drivers have announced a series of walkouts in the runup to Christmas. Planned strikes by Metroline bus services, which cover west, northwest and north London, have been suspended but there are still strikes going ahead on Abellio bus services, affecting routes mainly in west and south London.

Strikes are set to take place on 16, 17, 24, 27, 31 December and 4, 5, 10, 12, 16, 19, 25, 26 January.

Postal service

Following postal strikes in October that failed to improve the 2% pay increase set out by Royal Mail, the Communication Workers Union called on its members to take national industrial action again on 14, 15, 23 and 24 December.

And teachers in England and Wales are also inching closer to the first national dispute over pay since 2008, after the largest teachers' union for England and Wales, the National Education Union (NEU), said 86% of its members who responded to an initial ballot were willing to strike. They rejected a 5% pay rise and launched a formal ballot to strike.

Greetings from the King and Queen

Taken less than a week before the death of the Queen, the card shows the then Prince of Wales and Duchess of Cornwall at the Braemar Games in Scotland.

Framed by a red border the timeless image shows Camilla looking fondly towards her husband as he marvels at the highland games, one of his favourite events.

Inside, a simple message reads: Wishing you a very Happy Christmas and New Year.

The intimate picture of the couple at ease was captured on September 3, just five days before the monarch and Charles's mother died at nearby Balmoral, and he became King Charles III. He and Camilla were the first to arrive and were with her when she

Last weekend King Charles was seen for the first time since the Harry and Meghan Netflix trailer was released – at Sunday worship in Sandringham, Norfolk.

Don't call it Christmas!

■ Call it 'winter closure period', Brighton University tells staff

advising staff to call Christmas the "winter closure period" to avoid offending students who are not Christian – but has offended free speech watchers instead.

The University of Brighton has been slammed as "Orwellian" over its Inclusive Language Guidance.

The nine pages of advice sent to lecturers also advises them not to ask students, "What is your Christian name?" but say, "What is your first name?" or "What is your given name?"

Andrew Allison, of the Freedom Association, said: "Universities are supposed to be places where ideas are freely debated. This is Orwellian

A UNIVERSITY is and ridiculous. Staff and advising staff to call students ought to ignore

Toby Young, of the Free Speech Union, added: "Universities are now getting into the thought control business."

As well as explaining that the term Christmas is "too Christian-centric", the guidelines also urge staff to avoid generalisations based on age, such as saying "millennial snowflakes" or "old people cannot use technology".

Staff should be "empowered" to use "inclusive language confidently and effectively, in order to ensure that both students and staff alike feel safe, valued and respected", the document says.

Daniel's Thrilled At Blanc Canvas

DANIEL Craig loves his role as detective Benoit Blanc so much he wants to still be portraying him when he's a pensioner.

The actor, 54, played James Bond for 15 years – from Casino Royale in 2006 and four more 007 outings until last year's No Time to Die.

But Daniel (above) says he had so much fun filming whodunnit caper Knives Out in 2019 and its sequel Glass Onion – on Netflix from December 23 he hopes the franchise lasts as long as his time as a screen spy.

He said: "We'd love to keep making Knives Out films. As long as we can keep making people laugh, we'll do it."

The star also told the festive Radio Times edition he loved watching "big-event" Agatha Christie films at Christmas, adding: "Every single star in the world was in them – a lovely shared experience."

Cry Harry, England and St George

AT LEAST we don't have to listen to JP Dellacamera anymore.

As an England fan, World Cups always have a sense of déjà vu for me. Or perhaps it's Groundhog Day.

Either way, As a nation we seem have an ingrained national pathology to either exaggerate our hopes catastrophize our mistakes. If we put in a strong showing in a group stage game we all suddenly transform into true believers; it's inevitable that our brave boys will grasp that elusive trophy amid a deafening rendition of "Football's Coming

Then if, God forbid, we stumble against a team the media deem to be minnows, the team and manager are blasted, lampooned and ridiculed by the media and fans

Fortunately this year our exit was a little different. Harry Kane and co. put in a mighty efford against the World Cup champs France last Saturday and for long stretches of the second half looked like the better team. But in the end the Three Lions suffered yet more penalty heartbreak - of a slightly different variety – but at least this time around nobody is likely to get burned in effigy. We also didn't have to contend with injury worries to precious metatarsals ahead of time or underhanded foreign villains after the fact (think Diego Simeone's simulation or Cristiano Ronaldo's wink), although to be fair, the ref had a bit of a shocker.

Same old, same old

But one thing that remained resolutely was the same complete awfulness of the US commentators in particular and their coverage in general. The cluelessness of the Fox team is hard to overstate. Alexei Lalas seems to think he is being paid by the decibel, Clint Dempsey issues incomprehensible non sequitur after another and if Landon Donovan ever had an original thought it would surely die of loneliness.

But proudly sitting pile of atop this inane incompetence is 'commentator' whose Dellacamera, seniority at Fox stems not from abilities but rather because he's been doing it for decades and was the only sap willing to cover this strange foreign sport thirty years ago before the rest of the country caught

It also doesn't help that the format of the US coverage is dictated by commercial interests and the subsequent need to fit in as many commercials as possible in pre-game, half time and post game. That means that clips and analysis are whittled down to barely a couple of seconds, which makes in-depth and grown-up analysis impossible. As any true soccer fan will tell you, goals are created by what happens in the 5-10 seconds before the finish. But Fox can't show you that stuff, because they've got ads for Budweiser, Dodge Ram or State Farm demanding to be aired.

BBC to the rescue

Luckily for us, the sheer number of group stage matches meant that Dellacamera had to share duties with some far more capable commentators, specifically splendid Ian Darke and Derek Rae. But as the tournament progressed and the matches became sequential, rather than simultaneous, it became all Dellacamera, all the Oh, serenity! This was akin to listening to Beethoven after a nonstop diet of thrash metal. Calm, authoritative, reasoned coverage, in comprehensible English, by analysts who actually knew their stuff. The very British notion of television owners paying a license fee to fund a noncommercial broadcasting entity does seem hugely eccentric and somewhat antiquated at times, but when the coverage is of an event that really matters - like the World Cup - it all makes glorious sense.

Trivia in TinselTown!

The last Brits in LA Pub Quiz before Christmas will be held on Tuesday Dec 20 (7.30 kick off) at the Market Tavern with quizmaster Sandro Monetti ready to play Santa and hand out a sackful of prizes.

The festive fun last time saw Naughty Bits with Gravy (above) beat a dozen other teams to the trivia title while The Grinches had to settle for the consolation prize of a potato and birthday girl Natalie Bingham (right) celebrated her team's third place finish with a sticky toffee pudding.

Meanwhile...our cricket team looks unstoppable

■ Test win gives England first series victory over Pakistan since 2005

England pulled off another sensational victory in Pakistan at the weekend, winning the second Test by 26 runs to seal a historic series triumph.

Mark Wood took three crucial wickets on the fourth day in Multan just as Pakistan were closing in on what would have been a superb chase of 355

His efforts secured victory for England in their first Test series in Pakistan since 2005 and their first over these opponents outside of the UK in 22 years.

At 290-5, Wood had Mohammad Nawaz caught down the leg side for 45 then, one run later, did the same to dismiss Saud Shakeel for 94, but only after a lengthy deliberation by the third umpire.

Abrar Ahmed was caught at cover off James Anderson and Wood splattered the stumps of Zahid Mahmood at pace in excess of 90mph for his fourth wicket of the innings.

Though Salman Agha

kept tension high with regular boundaries, Ollie Robinson had number 11 Mohammad Ali caught behind to leave Pakistan 328 all out.

This is also the first time England have ever won two Tests in an away series against Pakistan.

They will look for a clean sweep in the third and final Test in Karachi, which began on Friday.

Before this series, England had only ever won two away Tests to Pakistan in 30 attempts across 61 years. Now, they have won two in a week.

Furthermore, they have followed up the thrilling triumph in the first Test in Rawalpindi with another heart-stopping success in Multan.

However, whereas England rarely felt likely to lose the first Test, this time they got themselves into danger of their own making.

A careless collapse of 5-19 on the third morning opened the door for a Pakistan side with form for impressive chases - in July they knocked off 342 to beat Sri Lanka.

With England's spinners unable to exert control and the pace bowlers seemingly out of the magic deliveries they produced on Sunday, Pakistan inched closer. A growing crowd at a ground hosting its first Test since 2006 cheered every run.

But Wood, in his first Test since March and bowling with the travelling England fans in the stand behind him, made the telling intervention.

It was not without controversy. TV umpire Joel Wilson took an age looking at replays

WINNING HABIT: England have won eight of nine Test matches under the leadership of Ben Stokes and Brendon McCullum

of Ollie Pope's diving catch off Shakeel, trying to determine whether or not the ball scraped the ground after the wicketkeeper took in his gloves.

The vital decision went England's way and Pakistan's best hope was gone.

Victory gives England their eighth in nine Tests since Ben Stokes took charge, the series win ends a run of three successive defeats away from home.

Skipper Stokes has got the bowling weapons and the characters who can step up when he needs them, none more so than the remarkable Wood, who has battled back from injury after injury to produce the goods.

"Stokesy said, 'Make a difference, change the game', and that's what I tried to do," added Wood. "The way Stokesy leads the team is fantastic. He is very clear-cut in the way he wants us to play. I would run through a brick wall for him so I'm really pleased I was able to get those wickets for him."

England have the opportunity for another piece of history in Karachi - never before have Pakistan lost three Tests in a series in their own country.

"We knew we were going to be in for one hell of a game and one hell of a fight, and that game wasn't a coin flip, I think it was always a 60-40 to France, they were always favourites.

"We went out but we played really well in the game and there were two or three things that went against us in that match. Penalties not given, fouls not given, Harry missing a penalty even though you would trust him with your life. Things like that happen in football, it's everyday business.

"I don't feel too different today than I did straight after the game. That was one of the best performances I've seen from an England team playing against a top team at a tournament."

But another former player was less charitable.

Joey Barton urged Gareth Southgate to resign and told the FA to "stop rewarding failure".

That's because the former Manchester City midfielder reckons Southgate should have already stepped down.

He said on Twitter: "Can't believe Southgate hasn't resigned yet.

"That's two World Cups and a home European Championship we could/ should have won.

"Stop rewarding failure. Got to go. Time to hire somebody who can win. Pizza Hut advert years ago. Enough said."

Cherries get some Hollywood glitz

BOURNEMOUTH have taken a leaf out of Wrexham's book by bringing in a Hollywood star as part of their new ownership group.

Creed and Black Panther actor Michael B Jordan was the shock name on the list of the backers when US businessman Bill Foley's £120million takeover was officially completed on Monday.

Jordan, who is now a minority shareholder at Bournemouth, follows in the footsteps of Wrexham owners and fellow Hollywood A-listers Ryan Reynolds and Rob McElhenney.

After months o negotiations with the Cherries, Foley, proprietor of the Vegas Golden Knights ice hockey team, replaces Maxim Demin as main owner following approval from the Premier League. Foley, 78, said: "We will move forward with an 'always advance, never retreat' approach that has defined all of my endeavours.

"I am committed to work with the best football and business minds available to enhance player development, facilities, and the fan experience to put Bournemouth in the best possible position to succeed."

FA to seek quick Southgate decision

Gareth Southgate will be asked for a quick decision over his future by the FA to give his employers time to find a replacement if required.

The England manager is taking a break with his family after returning from Qatar following England's World Cup quarter-final defeat against France, with talks with FA chief executive Mark Bullingham and technical director John McDermott are planned for early in the new year.

Southgate waited for four months after last year's European Championship defeat to Italy to re-commit himself to the job by signing a twoyear contract extension last November, but time will be of the essence this time around.

The 52-year-old is conscious of not leaving the FA in the lurch just two months before England begin their European Championship campaign with a difficult away game in Italy, and 18 months before the tournament itself.

succession plans in place and a shortage of credible English candidates, with Eddie Howe and Graham Potter committed to Newcastle and Chelsea respectively.

Southgate will not push for a new contract having signed an extension taking him through to the 2024 European Championship last year.

Although badly shaken by the criticism he received from fans during last summer's UEFA Nations League, particularly the loud booing that followed a 4-0 defeat to Hungary at Molineux in June, he has been heartened by England's development since and believes they can continue to improve.

Southgate will also speak to senior players after his Christmas break, although most of them have already made it clear publicly that they want him to stay.

"I actually hope he doesn't go back into club management," he told the Sky Sports World Cup podcast. "I look at him and think there's no FA have no English person alive who has got more experience at major tournaments, junior tournaments and playing for his country.

"He has seen it all and I think he should be kept within the system to design the future. He has been there for 10 years, we've had great success with the women's teams, with the younger teams, and I think we've had really good success with the men's team, and I feel like he has seen that improvement in performance and culture over 10 years. I would like him to stay with the FA beyond his coaching role."

However, Neville does think Southgate needs to make a decision quickly and not let things drag on too far into the new year, with England playing Italy in Naples in March in a Euro 2024 qualifier.

"It was a seven or a seven-and-a-half. A good score. Par," said Neville of England's overall World Cup display in Qatar. "I think we always knew there was a collision course coming, more than likely with France in the quarter-final, and it was a cont. on page 19, col. 3

'Sad' Lloris backs mate Harry to get over failure

HUGO LLORIS has backed Harry Kane to bounce back from his rare World Cup failure.

The England skipper blazed a late penalty high over the bar and, amid the euphoria of France's win on Saturday, Lloris, right, was "saddened" by Kane's role in the outcome.

He said: "I know he is strong and will overcome but I can only share this moment of pain with him. The English team put in a big performance and the French players deserve credit.

"He put it over and for the fortunately France team, because it was a turning point.

"Of course we're happy but the man I am is saddened because he is a team-mate I have known for a long time, a man I respect enormously who took responsibility at an important time."

He said: "We have to savour this. It's a big moment. It's England. We did a very good job. The French players deserve credit. We have to prepare for the next battle."

Some had described Lloris as the Achilles heel in the French team. But Aurelien Tchouameni, who bagged the opening goal in a 2-1 victory, said: "It's

"There are always things said...the most important thing is to respond on the pitch. He did that today and we are happy to have him.

"Now we need to continue like this."

The French overcame Morocco, 2-0, Wednesday's semi-final and will play Argentina on Sunday in their bid to retain the sport's ultimate prize.
