ROYAL TRUCE ON THE WAY?

Lilibet and Archie to be given titles as Royal Family extends olive branch ahead of Coronation

PRINCE Harry and Meghan's relationship with the Royal Family is thawing after it emerged they have decided to give their children the titles of prince and princess.

Commentators said the move could signify a new era of royal relations – and raised hopes the exiles will accept an invitation to the King's Coronation in May.

The couple announced this week that their 21-month-old daughter Lilibet – named after the late Queen Elizabeth – was christened last Friday and that they have decided to give their children the formal royal titles.

It marks the first time the couple have referred to either of their children as either prince or princess.

Their son, who will turn four on the day of the Coronation, will become known as Prince Archie.

Harry and Meghan informed the King of their intentions to use the titles ahead of the announcement, a source said.

The couple also invited the King and Queen Camilla and Prince William and Kate to the christening in LA last Friday – another move that is being seen as a sign that relations between the couple and the rest of the royals are improving.

The royals did not attend because of the time constraints and official engagements in Britain.

But royal commentator Afua Hagan said: "The lines of communication are improving. There has been a defrosting of royal relations – from both sides."

She believes the couple's decision to bestow the titles on their children signified their intent to attend the Coronation. Over the weekend Harry and Meghan confirmed they had been invited but refused to say whether they will go. Ms Hagan added: "They still want to have ties to the Royal Family."

infamous interview

Harry and Meghan are understood to have only just decided that their children's prince and princess titles would be adopted in formal situations, although they will not be used in everyday conversation.

The children automatically became prince and princess when their grandfather, King Charles, acceded to the throne six months ago but neither the Palace nor the couple confirmed whether the titles would be used.

While Archie and Lilibet will take on the titles, they will not use their His/Her Royal Highness styles. This is because their parents relinquished the use of their HRH styles in an official capacity when they stepped down as senior working royals in the spring of 2020.

Meghan had suggested in her infamous interview with Oprah Winfrey in March 2021 that Archie had been denied the title of prince because of his race. She said there was "no explanation" for the decision and insisted titles were not important to her or her husband.

But she believed the lack of title would deny him automatic protection.

However, Archie was not named a prince as he was too far down the line of succession at the time.

As the great-grandchild of the monarch, he was not a first-born son of a future king, unlike William's son, Prince George.

Tensions had been high after the couple aired their grievances in a TV interview with Oprah Winfrey and a Netflix series, before Harry published his bombshell memoir, in which he revealed intimate personal conversations with his closest relatives.

ANOTHER WEEK, ANOTHER TELL-ALL: Harry with Gabor Maté this week

And at the weekend Harry has complained of how he was starved of attention during his "incredibly painful" childhood during a 90-minute global livestream with leading therapist and physician Dr Gabor Maté.

'acute dilemma'

In the £19-a-head event to promote his book, he said he had moved his family to the US to break the "cycle of pain".

Speaking of his relationship with drugs, he said cocaine "didn't do anything for me", adding: "It was more a social thing. It gave me a sense of belonging and probably also made me feel different to the way I was feeling, which was kind of the point. Marijuana is different, that actually did really help me."

Harry said alcohol was also "more of a social thing" and spoke of peer pressure around drinking. He said that using psychedelics had also helped him.

Speaking about his childhood trauma after his parents' divorce and the death of his mother, he said: "As a father I feel a huge responsibility to ensure that I don't pass on any traumas or negative experiences."

A spokesman for the Sussexes confirmed they had "recently received email correspondence from His Majesty's office regarding the Coronation".

The spokesman said: "An immediate decision on whether the Duke and Duchess will attend will not be disclosed by us at this time."

But one royal expert said the invitation presented an "acute dilemma" for the couple who may risk "appearing an irrelevance" if they stay away.

Veteran commentator Richard Fitzwilliams said: "On the one hand, they want discussions with senior royals and accountability for what they believe they went through when they were senior working royals.

"They want an apology. They will not get it."

Sunak vows to get tough on migrant crossings

■ PM says he is “up for the fight” and “confident we will win”

RESOLUTE Rishi Sunak has spelt out his no-nonsense migration laws with a clear message: “It’s this country and your government who should decide who comes here, not criminal gangs.”

He said his ‘very simple’ policy would seize back control of Britain’s borders by putting a stop to small boat crossings.

The Prime Minister said his ‘ambitious and bold’ approach ‘goes further than any Government has done before’ and would provoke opposition. But he vowed he as “up for the fight” and “confident we will win”.

Migrants making the perilous journey across the Channel will be banned from claiming asylum and removed within weeks under the reforms. Mr Sunak warned the situation would get “worse and worse” if no action was taken and vowed to stop thousands of refugees from entering the UK illegally within two years.

The PM told a Downing Street press conference: “If we can’t stop the boats, our ability to help genuine refugees in future will be constrained.

“Full control of our borders will allow us to decide who to help, and to provide safe and legal routes to those most in need.

“I understand there will be debate about the toughness of these measures. All I can say is we’ve tried it every other way and it has not worked. It’s this country and your Government who should decide who comes here, not criminal gangs.”

‘ambitious and bold’

Earlier, during a visit to Dover, he told reporters: “We have a situation where criminal gangs are cruelly exploiting people. Tragically, some of them are dying.

“Unless we do something novel, ambitious and bold we won’t be able to stop the boats. And that’s what our legislation does. People can have confidence as it goes further than any government has done before.

“People can see that. It delivers a system that I think people all agree is the right one.

“[They] can see I’m someone who is gripping this problem and will deliver for them.”

Lawyers are already preparing to snarl up the courts in a bid to stop the Government in its tracks.

But Mr Sunak insisted he is “up for the fight” and is “confident that we’ll win”.

The Prime Minister made it clear he intends to “stop the boats” before the next General Election, adding: “I wouldn’t be standing here if I didn’t think I could deliver on this promise.”

Challenged on whether his administration’s Illegal Migration Bill is compatible with the British tradition of compassion, he said: “What is not compassionate is to allow the current situation to persist.

“There is nothing compassionate about allowing vulnerable people to perish in the Channel – people being exploited by criminal gangs and smugglers.

“There is nothing compassionate or fair about us not being able to help the truly vulnerable people around the world. Our system is being overwhelmed by those jumping the queue illegally.”

More than 45,000 migrants crossed the HUMAN CARGO: migrants are rescued by a Borderforce vessel; last year 45,000 made the dangerous crossing from France

Channel in small boats last year and 3,000 have made the journey so far in 2023.

In Dover, Mr Sunak was shown around a control room where workers explained how they use tracking radars to monitor movements in the English Channel.

Staff told him on busy days “we have to prioritise. We have to look in the boats and see if there are women and children”.

The PM was also shown a small boat that was intercepted by Border Force employees on Sunday. Staff handed him a card thought to have been given to migrants by people smugglers, instructing them to call a number when they reach the halfway point in their journey across the Channel. He then viewed a surveillance drone used to relay live video and was shown inside a van used as a mobile operations vehicle, also tasked with monitoring movements at sea.

Mr Sunak’s Bill will apply retrospectively to migrants who arrive in the country from today in an attempt to stop a surge in crossings by people trying to beat the system.

Adults entering the UK without permission will be barred from using the Human Rights Act and modern slavery laws to challenge deportation. They will face a lifetime ban from entering the country. Mr Sunak said: “We will detain those who come here illegally and then remove them in weeks, either to their own country if it is safe or to a safe third country like Rwanda.

“And once you are removed, you will be banned – as you are in America and Australia – from ever re-entering our country.”

Officials indicated hopes of the Bill being passed by the end of the year.

More blizzards ahead for frigid Britain

THE UK was bracing for another fierce winter storm this week as the severe weather that has afflicted much of the northern hemisphere continued.

Snow and rain were expected to bring further travel disruption across large areas of Britain on Friday, and three amber warnings for blizzard conditions with up to 15in of snow were issued by the Met Office on Thursday and remain in place until Friday morning.

Widespread snow was expected across central England and Wales, following heavy snowfall which has already affected commuters on Thursday. Flight delays were reported in the east Midlands, while travel by rail was hit by snow and ice, with issues expected to continue until Friday afternoon.

Snow showers are also expected in Scotland and could reach Northern Ireland and south-west England by the weekend.

The Met Office chief meteorologist Jason Kelly said: “With some strong winds accompanying these snow showers, blizzard conditions are likely for a time in northern England and Wales, as well as parts of Northern Ireland.

“Ice will be a continuing hazard for many in the forecast period, with very low overnight temperatures likely to exacerbate continued likely travel disruption.”

The Met Office added that it would be an “exceptionally cold night” on Friday, with a clear and frosty start to Saturday for most.

Wednesday night was the coldest of the year so far, with temperatures plummeting to -16C in Altnaharra, Scotland.

The Peak District and Pennines were expected to be hit especially hard, with remote communities at risk of being cut off.

LINEKER: the Match of the Day presenter vowed to “continue to try to speak up for those poor souls that have no voice.”

Tories cry foul as Lineker compares Sunak’s migrant plans to those of Nazi Germany

SOCCKER legend Gary Lineker was handed a straight red card by furious Tory MPs this week after he refused to delete a tweet comparing Rishi Sunak’s migrant plans to the actions of Nazi Germany.

The BBC’s highest-paid star, who earns £1.35million a year, also attracted the wrath of his bosses for the divisive post.

Downing Street called his intervention “not acceptable”, while Tory MPs lined up to criticise his apparent breach of BBC impartiality rules.

Labour also condemned the comments, with Sir Keir Starmer’s spokesman saying comparisons with the Nazis “aren’t always the best way” to make an argument.

BBC bosses so far have refused to say if the star had been given a dressing down.

Match of the Day host Gary had said he would continue to speak up for people with “no voice”. But it is understood he has not responded to calls from the BBC to “remind him of his responsibilities”.

Gary said the language used setting out the small-boats plan was “not dissimilar to that used by Germany in the 1930s”. He told his 8.6 million followers: “Good heavens, this is beyond awful.”

Replying to a Twitter user who said he was “out of order”, the former striker said: “There is no huge influx. We take far fewer refugees than other major European countries. This is just an immeasurably cruel policy directed at the most vulnerable people in language that is not dissimilar to that used by Germany in the 30s, and I’m out of order?”

He added: “I have never known such love and support in my life than I’m getting this morning. I’ll continue to try to speak up for those poor souls that have no voice.”

Home Secretary Suella Braverman said she was “disappointed” with his comments. “It’s unhelpful to compare our measures, which are lawful, proportionate and compassionate, to 1930s Germany.”

Energy Secretary Grant Shapps tweeted: “As a Jewish Cabinet minister I need no lessons about 1930s Germany from Gary Lineker. Like Gary, I am hosting refugees in my home. Unlike Gary, I do not believe it right to tolerate criminal gangs trafficking vulnerable people across the Channel.”

Rowling: my trans views come from teen anxiety

JK Rowling has said confusion she felt over her sexuality influences her view that teenagers are too young to decide to change gender.

The writer, 57, told a podcast she did not feel that 14-year-olds could “truly understand what the loss of their fertility is”.

She said: “As an adolescent...I questioned my sexuality, thinking, ‘Well, I can tell my friends are pretty. Does that mean I’m gay? I grew up to be straight, but I’ve never forgotten that feeling of anxiety around my body. I didn’t feel like I fitted in. Aged 11 or 12, I looked very androgynous with short hair.

“I was acutely anxious about my changing body and became aware it was attracting attention that I didn’t welcome, particularly from boys at school.” She added: “At 14, I would have said that I didn’t want children but [motherhood] has been the most joyful, wonderful thing in my life.”

Princess morphs into Combat Kate

THE Princess of Wales became Combat Kate on Wednesday and proved that high-pressure situations are snow problem for her.

Kate, 41, donned camouflage gear and braved the freezing temperatures to join soldiers from her regiment on manoeuvres.

The mum-of-three, who was made Colonel of the Irish Guards last year, was happy to muck in, too.

She put some life-saving field dressings on a soldier “felled by a gunshot wound” and got to handle some anti-tank weaponry.

Kate said the rapid gun fire and explosions brought the realistic medical drill “to life”. But the royal remained focused as she applied a tourniquet and gauze to the injured trooper.

The Princess apologised to her patient, telling him: “It’s the first time I’ve done this.”

But her efforts impressed LCpl Jodie Newell, 25, who said Kate took the stressful situation “in her stride, just like she has done it before”.

Members of the 1st Battalion Irish Guards then took Kate on a tour of the Salisbury Plain training area.

She was shown a Javelin anti-tank missile launcher and given detailed information on the de mining training being given to Ukrainian troops.

The royal also met guardsmen who have been training park rangers on counter-poaching operations in Africa.

Battalion commander Lt Col James Aldridge said it had been “a real honour” for the guardsmen to meet their Royal Colonel in person.

He added: “It is particularly fitting on International Women’s Day that a few of our female soldiers met such an inspiring female role model.”

For his latest nature masterpiece, Sir David stays close to home

"I can assure you that nature in these islands, if you know where to look, can be just as dramatic and spectacular as anything I've seen elsewhere."

WILD man of the natural world Sir David Attenborough is back where he belongs for his spectacular new series.

There are no frozen wastelands, no endless deserts and no impenetrable rainforests.

Instead, the veteran broadcaster is taking the world on a wildlife journey through his home land – bringing the dramatic and spectacular expanses of the British Isles to life in a way never seen before.

After travelling to every corner of the Earth, Sir David will celebrate the rich variety of wildlife on his own doorstep.

Launching his new series – Wild Isles – the 96-year-old said: "In my long life, I've been lucky enough to travel to almost every part of the globe and gaze upon some of its most beautiful and dramatic sights. But I can assure you that nature in these islands, if you know where to look, can be just as dramatic and spectacular as anything I've seen elsewhere.

"The British Isles are globally important for nature. In this series we'll show you why that is so and celebrate the wonders of these islands that we call home."

The five-part series will take viewers on a journey through the nation's woodland, grassland, freshwater and ocean habitats that support wildlife increasingly at risk from climate change.

'fragile and precious'

Each episode captures new behaviours, from battling butterflies to killer whales on the hunt. Viewers will glimpse delicate damselflies, huge colonies of gannets, shy badgers and majestic white-tailed eagles.

Our 22,000-mile coast line, the warming effect of the Gulf Stream and the extreme range of temperatures helps create "one of the richest natural histories in Europe", he added.

The first episode – Our Precious Isles – will showcase killer whales tracking down seal meals, golden eagles scavenging in snowy mountains, puffins being chased by greedy gulls and sinister woodland plants holding unsuspecting insects hostage.

Episode two delves into the world of woodlands, while episode three explores the biodiversity of grasslands.

Viewers will journey to freshwater habitats in the next episode, before ending with the vast expanse of the ocean.

Co-producer Beccy Speight, CEO of the RSPB, said: "We can't wait to see what action is sparked by this milestone series. Nature is in crisis, but we know that together we can save it."

Filmed over the course of three years, Wild Isles showcases 145 locations.

Sir David had to be kept away from fledging chicks during filming due to fears that an outbreak of avian flu could be fatal. One segment called for him to be present while Manx shearwater chicks on Skomer Island, off the Pembrokeshire coast, left their burrows for the first time and took flight on a remarkable 6,000-mile migratory journey.

'he will die'

Mr Fothergill said: "The shearwaters are not great at taking off, so what the warden on the island said is, 'If you sit David close to the burrows, they will almost certainly climb up his arm onto his head and take off from his head', and we thought, 'Wow, that could be TV gold.'" But two weeks before filming was set to start, reports emerged of avian flu on the neighbouring island of Grassholm.

Mr Fothergill said: "I have an old friend who's an expert on infectious diseases and I rang him up for his opinion.

"He said, 'Well, bird flu is actually extremely hard to catch, but if he [Sir David] gets it he will die.'"

Readers with a VPN on their computers will be able to watch the show, which debuts 7pm GMT on Sunday, via the BBC iPlayer. The show will also debut on the USA later this year.

VETERAN British actor has been left bemused and occasionally speechless by the all the hoopla surrounding his first Oscar nomination, recently telling Vanity Fair: "It is an odd situation, acting as a competitive sport.... "It's sort of bizarre. But everybody knows the score."

Nighy got the nomination relatively late in his career for Living, which is set in 1950s London and which stars Nighy plays a middle-ranking public servant – bowler-hatted, softly spoken, rarely smiling, mocked behind his back by his underlings – who is shocked by a cancer diagnosis that gives him only a few months to live and wants suddenly to make up for decades of lost time. By contrast, the actor is 73 and seems yet to reach Peak Nighy. This new role has brought him his first Oscar nomination. He is on a roll.

Living, by South

African director Oliver Hermanus, is an adaptation of the great Akira Kurosawa's 1952 film Ikiru, about a Japanese salaryman who realises life has slipped away from him. Like the original, Living is a small, quiet film. Nobel laureate Kazuo Ishiguro wrote the screenplay, which is also Oscar-nominated, specifically for Nighy, whose official response to the nomination had the self-deprecating, mildly ironic tone his fans expect and love.

"Everyone associated with Living is honoured by the Academy's nomination and grateful for the spotlight it throws upon the film," he said. "We hope it will encourage people to see it. I was surrounded by assassins and this belongs to them all."

Even before the nomination was confirmed, he had happily admitted to being excited being seen as a contender, even with the endless dinners, receptions and roundtable interviews with one's rivals that are part of any Oscar campaign. There is a thrill in that.

THE END IS NIGHY: The much-loved British actor gives the performance of his career as a terminally ill bureaucrat in Living.

Nighy left school at 16 and worked as a messenger boy on the local paper before he found a place in a drama college. He worked at the National Theatre in London in his 20s and did some television comedy, but acting was never a "dead cert", as he once put it.

His breakthrough film role came in 2003 with Love Actually, in which he played a washed-up rock star cornered into making a Christmas record. The film won him a BAFTA as best supporting actor; he was 54. "That film changed the way I go to work," he said later. "It changed everything. I can never be grateful enough to [director] Richard Curtis."

The following year, he made Shaun of the Dead; he subsequently had roles in the Pirates of the Caribbean and Harry Potter franchises, along with a string of British dramedies including the ragingly successful Best Exotic Marigold Hotel. He could bring a comic edge to an otherwise syrupy romance; equally, his weathered face and mastery of silences would elevate a laddish comedy by adding a note of melancholy.

Nighy's character is head of the London County Hall's public works department, one of a hive of small offices that seem to work largely at cross-purposes, burying every proposed project in protocol and paper for long enough to ensure it never happens. "There's no harm," he will murmur as he slides the latest bit of bothersome correspondence into one of the lower tiers on his in-tray. At home, he moves around like a ghost, avoiding getting in the way of his son and daughter-in-law. Widowed decades earlier, he still seems locked in patterns of grief.

His character has something of his father, a garage mechanic whose impeccable sense of appropriate dress is something Nighy notably came to embrace himself once the '60s were over.

"He would have had the same commitment to a kind of modesty of conduct. He would never make much noise, my dad; he was a very reserved man and he admired those things, he was a very principled man and would be appalled by the current state of affairs, I think. So many things would offend him."

The Oscar ceremony takes place this Sunday evening. All of Britain will likely be rooting for him.

BA certainly not one Oscar hopeful's favorite airline

Dublin Oscar hopeful Barry Keoghan has slammed British Airways after his luggage was lost on his trip to Los Angeles.

The 30-year-old (pictured, right) criticised the "bad customer service", saying that there was a lot of sentimental items in his suitcase and the airline "can't seem to be any way helpful in one bit".

Keoghan has been nominated for best supporting actor in this weekend's 95th Academy Awards for his role as Dominic Kearney in the Banshees of Inisherin, marking his first ever Oscar nomination.

In a now-deleted tweet posted on Wednesday, he said: "Lost my suitcase with @British_Airways and they can't seem to be any way helpful in one bit."

"Here in LA for Oscars and had tons of sentimental stuff I wanted to wear and bring with me. Such bad customer service. Sent me to LAX to tell me they can't help me. Tut tut."

Keoghan recently won a Bafta award for best supporting actor for his performance in the Banshees of Inisherin. The film has fuelled high hopes for success at the Academy Awards, with nine total nominations.

Plenty of craic and an Irish hello at Quiz Night

Before heading to the Oscars, the stars and makers of nominated short film An Irish Goodbye stopped off at O'Briens to entertain the crowd at Tuesday's Brits in LA Pub Quiz.

Actor James Martin was an especially big hit, leading the packed pub in a singalong of Dirty Old Town, a hit for The Pogues, and his song from the movie, I'll Tell Me Ma.

James - pictured (top) with quizmaster Sandro Monetti (who is covering the Oscars for BBC Radio 5 Live on Sunday night) also saw his team finish third in the Academy Awards themed trivia contest, which was won by team Bubble and Squeak Out a Win (above).

Join the quiz fun next Tuesday, March 14, at O'Briens in Santa Monica where more special guests will be in attendance.

You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. USING HIS HEAD: William Saliba powered in a towering header to open the scoring

EUROPA LEAGUE: Arteta not impressed by Sporting thriller

Arsenal manager Mikel Arteta says his side must "improve massively" if they are to continue winning games after the Gunners were held by Sporting Lisbon in an entertaining Europa League last-16 first leg on Thursday.

France defender William Saliba put the Premier League leaders ahead with a towering header before Sporting took advantage of poor defending to score either side of half-time through Goncalo Inacio and Paulinho.

An own goal by the hosts' Japanese midfielder Hidemasa Morita ensured Arsenal will start on level terms when the teams meet in the return leg at Emirates Stadium next Thursday.

However, Arteta was unimpressed his side had conceded two goals for the second successive game.

"It's true that it's something that we must improve massively if we want to keep winning games," said the Spaniard.

"When you concede two poor goals like we did away from home in Europe it's very difficult to get a positive result.

"We gave too many simple balls away. We need to defend our box much better."

In an absorbing game in the Portuguese capital, Arsenal's first-half lead lasted just 12 minutes before Inacio nodded home the equaliser after hesitancy from keeper Matt Turner.

Paulinho fired Sporting ahead from close range only for Arsenal to equalise through a wicked deflection off Morita.

Both teams created numerous chances in a free-flowing encounter.

Sporting's former Tottenham winger Marcus Edwards was denied by Turner when the score was 1-1, while Paulinho wasted a great opportunity to make it 3-1.

Arsenal had a chance to take a lead back to London but Fabio Vieira's header was kept Arsenal are chasing a first Premier League title since 2003-04 but Arteta clearly sees the Europa League as something worth winning rather than a distraction to the main prize.

Despite making six changes, he fielded several key players in Portugal including Gabriel Martinelli - Arsenal's leading scorer in the Premier League - and Bukayo Saka before behind him as well.

Marcus Rashford, Antony and Wout Weghorst were also on the scoresheet as United put themselves in a strong position to reach the last eight when the tie is concluded in Seville next week.

But Ten Hag knows one win alone will not banish the memory of Sunday's annihilation at Anfield, especially as he had been irritated by some of his side's performances preceding it, including the Carabao Cup final victory against Newcastle.

"We don't ignore it," he said. "We made mistakes and we got hammered. We showed complacency and you can never do that in top football."

As the weeks pass, it will be interesting to see if any individual does pay a price for what unfolded in what many view as the Premier League's greatest rivalry.

For now though, it can be claimed normal service has resumed.

Sunday's London derby at Fulham.

It is all to play for in seven days' time in the return leg against Sporting, but Arteta's side will have to improve defensively if they are to advance to the quarter-finals against opponents who started the season in the Champions League.

strength," added Ten Hag. "But sometimes he has to control that because when it's too much, it becomes a weakness. He knows that, but there are always small margins."

Fernandes ran away to celebrate his goal with his hands to his ears as the home fans chanted 'Bruno, Bruno' in his honour, showing they are

CONTE EXIT AMID SPURS SHAMBLES?

■ Tuchel and Pochettino in the frame to replace Italian after feeble Champions League exit

SPURS tumbled out of the Champions League with the meekest of performances Wednesday night, stumbling through a tepid goalless draw with AC Milan, who progressed 1-0 on aggregate after their narrow win in the first leg in Italy.

The Spurs game-plan of catching Milan on the counter was thwarted by their visitors showing little attacking intent either, preferring instead to run down as much of the clock as possible by exaggerating every minor ailment.

That included an elbow incident involving Pierre-Emile Hojbjerg which so annoyed Conte that his return to the dugout after illness was marked not with a 'Get Well Soon' card but a yellow one.

In the second half, Pedro Porro was soon brought on and finally Spurs had a player on the pitch who looked like he wanted to make things happen.

That bug was catching and Hojbjerg carved himself a smart chance which Maignan saved as the crowd finally began to find its voice.

But Tottenham seemed hell-bent on causing their own problems.

A period of sustained pressure looked promising, but when AC Milan again broke, World Cup winner Romero clattered so hard into Theo Hernandez that he seemed determined to pick up a second yellow card.

Milan manager Stefano Pioli was booked for his rather theatrical reaction, but all the while Romero writhed on the floor getting treatment, French referee Clement Turpin simply stood there with that red card held ready in his hand.

The Lillywhites can have no complaints after 180 minutes of largely toothless football wherein they managed an feeble XG number (expected goals) of 0.9 over the two legs. At no point did a savvy but limited Milan team look under threat in either leg, and long before the final whistle brought a merciful end to proceedings Wednesday night, jeers and whistles were ringing around the home team's magnificent stadium.

The loss will almost surely hasten the end of Antonio Conte's reign as manager, with insiders tipping Mauricio Pochettino and Thomas Tuchel as his most likely successor.

Conte, out of contract in June, has endured a traumatic season, undermined by bereavements and health problems and – with the team struggling – it has come to feel that a separation would be in everyone's best interests. The Italian has certainly made few friends at the club in recent months, with both with his refusal to discuss a new contract and, worse, in most fans' eyes, his near-constant harping about the club's failure to match their rivals' spending in the transfer market.

The cleanest and favoured scenario is for it to come at the end of the campaign, although the board may act before then if the situation worsens. Conte's team have suffered three bad results in a row, the first the 1-0 FA Cup defeat at Sheffield United on Wednesday of last week, which Harry Kane described as a "dagger in our hearts". Spurs lost 1-0 at Wolves in the Premier League on Saturday and drew 0-0 at home to Milan on Wednesday for a 1-0 Champions League last-16 aggregate exit.

Brilliant Bruno bounces back

Manchester United manager Erik ten Hag hailed goalscoring skipper Bruno Fernandes as the star man in his side's Europa League last-16 first-leg victory against Real Betis on Thursday.

Fernandes had taken the brunt of huge criticism heaped on United following Sunday's record 7-0 Premier League humiliation at Liverpool.

But Ten Hag confirmed in the build-up the Portuguese would remain captain if Harry Maguire was not on the field - and Fernandes repaid that faith with an outstanding contribution to a much-needed win.

It included his eighth goal of the season as he headed home Luke Shaw's 58th-minute

"He was the best player on the pitch," said Ten Hag. "He played a little deeper role and he was brilliant, making the game from the back position, with a lot of good passes in between the lines. From there we created a lot of chances."

Ten Hag accepted

Fernandes was not perfect. A late tackle on Betis' former Manchester City goalkeeper Claudio Bravo brought the midfielder a yellow card and did not look good.

But the United boss admitted it is a fine line Fernandes has to tread.

"His passion is his
