

CORONATION: Harry's going. Meghan isn't.

A FRAGILE truce seems to have broken out within the royal family following the news that Prince Harry WILL attend the coronation of his father...but without his wife, the Duchess of Sussex.

The disgruntled fifth in line to the throne ended months of speculation by announcing this week that he will attend Westminster Abbey on May 6 to see his father King Charles III and stepmother Queen Camilla crowned.

The Prince's wife Meghan will stay at home in California with their two children in a move that lifts a cloud over the occasion.

But there will inevitably be a lot of scrutiny of the strained links between Harry and much of his family. The Duke of Sussex, 38 – who has laid bare his and Meghan's fraught relationship with the Royal Family in an outspoken documentary and memoir – has avoided irreparable damage and kept alive faint hopes of a reconciliation by accepting the invitation, according to sources.

Harry's participation at the event is expected to be marginal and, according to several royal observers, he is likely to be given an icy reception from some relatives who fear any conversations they have may be repeated in a book or TV show.

He is not expected to take part in Coronation Day processions and, as a non-working member of the Royal Family, is unlikely to make an appearance on the Buckingham Palace balcony after the ceremony.

negotiations

The Royal Household issued the following statement: "Buckingham Palace is pleased to confirm that the Duke of Sussex will attend the Coronation Service at Westminster Abbey.

"The Duchess of Sussex will remain in California with Prince Archie and Princess Lilibet."

Archewell – Harry and Meghan's charitable foundation – issued a near-identical statement.

Sources close to the Sussexes suggested that Meghan, 41, decided to stay in the US for several reasons, but mainly because she wanted to celebrate with Archie. The Prince, who will be four on Coronation Day, and his 22-month-old sister were not formally invited to the big day, partly as aides thought them too young. But it was made clear that their attendance for all or part of the service was something that could have been discussed if both their parents had accepted the King's invitation.

The news came what after what the Daily Mail described as 'weeks of negotiations" delicate and his decision to attend the service "is viewed as a potential olive branch by royal insiders". It will be taken by many as a sign of growing hopes of a reconciliation with his father. Royal sources said that his decision to attend has "pleased" the King, who is "keen to have the support of both his sons at the ceremony".

There has been growing speculation that the pair may even have spoken in recent weeks. But sadly Prince Harry's relationship with his brother William is still said to be "fraught", with the heir to the throne understood to feel "deeply betrayed by the many personal family revelations the Duke has made in his memoir" and other media interviews.

Harry had been said to be holding out for peace talks" with his family over the royal rift, but has decided to attend the coronation regardless. His decision is said to have prompted positive conversations that both sides hope will pave the way, in the longer term, for reconciliation between father and son.

A source told The Sun that the King "is happy that Harry, his son, who he calls his 'darling boy' will be at the Abbey". The King is "very disappointed that he won't see Meghan or his grandchildren but understands the situation".

'double insult"

Inevitably commentators from both camps have come forward to spin the news in a favorable or unfavorable light to their respective patrons. Ingrid Seward, editor of Majesty magazine, suggested that Meghan's non-attendance at the coronation is a "double insult" to father-in-law who her "walked her down the aisle in her hour of need" after her father, Thomas Markle, was too ill to attend her 2018 wedding. "I don't think Meghan wanted to risk being sat in the hinterland at the Abbey," she added.

But Omid Scobie, the royal commentator and author who is thought to be close to the couple and co-authored their Finding biography Freedom, tweeted: understand that Archie's fourth birthday played a factor in the couple's decision. Expect it to be a fairly quick trip to the UK for Prince Harry, who will only be attending the coronation ceremony at cont. on page 4, col. 4

Cautious Biden threads the needle in flying Ulster visit

President careful to project supportive, but not interventionist role in Irish affairs

PRESIDENT BIDEN made a lightning quick stop in Northern Ireland this week before moving to the Republic for a longer visit....but he ensure his first stop in Belfast was memorable with his careful language that has been hailed by all sides as a moment of delicate diplomacy.

Biden's task was to sum up the achievements of the 25 years since the Good Friday peace deal against a backdrop of all-too-frequent political instability in Belfast.

He said the return of the power-sharing devolved government at Stormont was "critical" for Northern Ireland.

But he followed that up by adding: "That's a decision for you to make, not for me to make."

The remark was s i m u l t a n e o u s l y challenging and sensitive.

The White House will have been aware that a tone which could have been interpreted as overbearing would have fuelled unionist hostility towards a president who they have often criticised in the past.

But Mr Biden's visit seems to have gone down reasonably well with the leader of unionism.

Sir Jeffrey Donaldson of the Democratic Unionist Party (DUP) said the president had made clear he hadn't come to "interfere" and that Mr Biden had "recognised the need to bring balance to what he had to say".

trade barriers

The DUP is vetoing the formation of a governing coalition at Stormont - the home of the Northern Ireland Assembly - in protest against Brexit trade barriers with the rest of the UK.

Mr Biden speaks often of his Irish roots but in Belfast he talked about his English ancestry.

He also mentioned the contribution made to the founding of the US by immigrants from an Ulster Scots background - the community which is associated with modern-day unionism.

incentive

That was surely an attempt to appeal to those in Northern Ireland who have been suspicious that US involvement in the peace process has been tinged with an Irish nationalist agenda.

The president's overriding message was that the US remained committed to Northern Ireland and was ready to invest.

Mr Biden even suggested Northern Ireland's economic output could triple "if things continue to move in the right direction".

The incentive was obvious - more stability would bring in more dollars.

The industries he mentioned are already bright spots in the Northern Ireland

President Biden"recognised the need to bring balance to what he had to say", said the leader of the Democratic Unionist Party

Biden drew a big cheer when he hugged James Martin, the Oscar-nominated Northern Irish actor who has Downs Syndrome economy - cybersecurity, life sciences, green energy.

And the biggest round of applause during the speech came when the president pointed out Northern Ireland actor James Martin, who was recently on stage at the Academy Awards when the short film he starred in won an Oscar.

unionist concerns

It was a way of highlighting Northern Ireland's global reputation as a hub for TV and film production. The projects which have been based here have included Game of Thrones - one of the biggest TV series of recent years.

Mr Biden seemed to suggest that the creative industries could be substantially expanded

- he described Northern Ireland as a "churn of creativity".

Earlier, the DUP issued a statement saying it won't be swayed by any particular US input in deciding whether and when to allow powersharing at Stormont to return.

The party is continuing to examine the new deal between the EU and the UK - the Windsor Framework - to assess whether it removes unionist concerns about Brexit trade barriers between Northern Ireland and Great Britain. There was no expectation that the most fulsome praise for him came from nonunionist parties. The Sinn Féin vicepresident Michelle O'Neill, who is in line to be first minister if the devolved government is restored, said Mr Biden's visit was a "special moment".

President Biden's arrival would herald a sudden breakthrough. And unsurprisingly the meet fulsome preise

It is likely that the president's schedule in Northern Ireland would have been more extensive if the political circumstances had been more favourable.

For example he did not accept an invitation to address the Stormont assembly, which was established by the Good Friday Agreement.

However the prevailing view among those who witnessed his speech is that Mr Biden handled the sensitivities with skill and gave Northern Ireland a worthwhile moment in the worldwide spotlight.

RIP: Dame Mary Quant

Twiggy leads tributes to iconic fashion designer Quant's designs epitomized Swinging London

Model Twiggy Lawson has led the tributes to designer Dame Mary Quant, who has died aged 93.

The fashion legend passed away "peacefully at home in Surrey", her family announced on Thursday.

Dame Mary was credited with popularizing the miniskirts that helped define the Swinging '60s.

Twiggy, who became a style icon during the era, said Dame Mary had "such an influence on young girls in the late 50s early 60s".

"She revolutionised fashion and was a brilliant female entrepreneur," she wrote in a social media post. "The 1960s would have never been the same without her."

Former Vogue editor Alexandra Shulman called Dame Mary a "leader of fashion but also in female entrepreneurship", adding she was "a visionary who was much more than a great haircut."

Dame Mary designed miniskirts, patterned tights, hot pants and plastic raincoats which epitomised the look of swinging London in the 1960s.

She took fashion off the catwalk and put it out on the street with clothes which were not just stylish but fun and affordable as well.

In doing so she became the pioneer of high street fashion, paving the way for the modern clothing chains that would become a familiar sight in every shopping centre.

'doom and gloom'

Mary Quant was born February 1930 in Blackheath, southeast London, the daughter of Jack and Mary Quant, who had originally come from mining families in South Wales.

They had both won scholarships to their local grammar school and then gone on to Cambridge before moving to London to become teachers and joining the middle class.

Her interest in clothes developed when she was barely out of nappies and she once recalled embarking on her first collection when she was "I didn't like the clothes I had. I wanted sleeves with a puffier top on them and I wanted this and wanted that and I was trying to cut up the bedspread and make them. From then on, I never stopped."

The war caused major disruption to Mary's education. She had to leave London because of the Blitz and ended up attending no fewer than 13 schools. Like many of her generation, she believed that the hardships endured during the war years helped spark the movement that became the swinging 60s.

"Before, there were 10 years of gloom and despair, when London was a bomb site," she once told The Sunday Telegraph. "Nothing moved, nothing happened. And then suddenly the next lot of young people said, 'Enough of this, we're going to do it,' and they did it themselves."

She won a scholarship to the prestigious Goldsmith's College where she failed to dress like their mothers and, with the post-war economic recovery well underway, had the disposable income to indulge their tastes.

It was the miniskirt more than any other garment, that came to epitomise the new liberated woman. Hems had been rising since the late 1950s but it was Quant who popularised the style and put it out into the mass market.

"It was the girls on the King's Road who invented the mini," she said. "I was making easy, youthful, simple clothes, in which you could move, in which you could move, in which you could run and jump and we would make them the length the customer wanted. I wore them very short and the customers would say, 'Shorter, shorter.'"

In 1966 she was awarded an OBE for her contribution to fashion, arriving for her investiture in trademark miniskirt and black gloves.

As the 60s progressed she launched hot pants onto the mass-market. They remained popular for a decade and have reappeared at regular intervals ever since.

By the 1970s she had begun moving away from clothes design and turned her attention to household goods and eventually to cosmetics.

Quant stepped back from the cosmetics business that bore her name when she sold it to a Japanese company in 2000, where her designs had always been popular. She was appointed a DBE in 2015.

In an interview in 2012 she was asked whether she was ever surprised by how successful she had been.

"I mostly felt, my God, what a marvellous life you had, you are very fortunate,' she said. 'I think to myself, you lucky woman - how did you have all this fun?"

Relationship is 'still special'

■ US-UK bond still flourishing, insists Sunak after meetiing Biden in Belfast

RISHI Sunak has declared the bond between Britain and America is flourishing after meeting President Joe Biden in Belfast.

The Prime Minister said "we're very close partners and allies" working together on economic security and helping Ukraine defeat Russia.

The President paid tribute to the "personal leadership" of the PM in securing the Windsor Framework with the EU which smoothed border trading snags.

The American leader said it was an "essential step to ensuring the hard-earned peace and progress of the Good Friday agreement".

During a 45-minute meeting Tuesday morning, the two leaders agreed to counter authoritarian countries, such as Russia, trying to manipulate global markets.

They said UK-US trade, worth an estimated £262billion last year, shows how like-minded allies can support security and "economic health".

Mr Sunak said of his talks with the President: "He and I had a great discussion about a range of issues including investment in Northern Ireland.

"But also on a range of foreign policy issues, the importance of economic security – and that comes on the back of the meeting I had with him last month in the US.

"We're very close partners and allies, we co-operate and talk on a range of things, whether that is supporting Ukraine or economic insecurity.

"Our relationship is in great shape and the President and I have lots we're working on together." Mr Biden, during an address in Belfast, said Mr Sunak's Windsor Framework agreement will lead to "significant investment" in the province, including from US firms.

He said: "I deeply appreciate the leadership of Prime Minister Sunak and European Commissioner Ursula von der Leyen to reach an agreement.

"The Windsor addresses Framework the practical realities of Brexit. And it is an essential step to ensuring the hard-earned peace and progress of the Good Friday Agreement are preserved strengthened. and Negotiators listened to business leaders across the UK and Ireland who shared what they needed to succeed."

But Mr Biden wants political leaders in Northern Ireland to return to power sharing.

He said: "I believe the democratic institutions established in the Good Friday Agreement remain critical for the future of Northern Ireland.

"For in politics, no matter what divides us, there are always areas that are going to bring us together if we look hard "Standing for peace and rejecting political violence must be one of those things."

President Biden said the response of Northern Ireland's leaders to February's shooting of Detective Chief Inspector John Caldwell in Omagh showed "the enemies of peace will not prevail".

Mr Caldwell was seriously injured in the dissident republican murder bid. Mr Biden said: "The attack was a hard reminder there will always be those who seek to destroy, rather than rebuild."

Amanda Sloat, senior director for Europe at the US National Security Council, said: "The fact the President is going to be engaging for the third time in three months and then again next month and again in June with the Prime Minister shows how close our cooperation is with the UK."

Queen Elizabeth viewed the risk of Harry being killed in battle as "acceptable" ...but "too great" for William

■ ITV show makes waves with Royal revelations

QUEEN Elizabeth viewed the risk of being killed in battle as "acceptable" for Prince Harry but "too great" for his older brother William.

The late monarch's assessments of the value of the lives of the "heir to the heir and the spare" are revealed in an explosive new insight into the world's most famous family.

ITV's new series The Real Crown reveals the family's different attitude towards William and Harry that could be seen as sowing the seeds of discontent that have driven a massive wedge between the now warring brothers.

The former head of the Army lifts the lid on the issue by talking about one of his private audiences with Elizabeth II.

Sir Mike Jackson, Chief of the General Staff from 2003 to 2006, said the Queen told him of the need for both princes to serve in the forces but only Harry should be sent to war.

He said: "She told me

"But it was decided st that for William as heir to I the heir the risk was too great. But for his younger brother the risk was a acceptable."

The retired general, 79, explained that he had a meeting with the Queen "once or twice a year" and faced a rigorous grilling – but it was an unwritten rule that what was said remained between them.

However, before making his revelation about her view on Harry's expendability in comparison to his older brother, he said: "I will break the rule by revealing what went on this one occasion when she was very clear."

He added: "You need to have done your homework. She is very wise."

Sir Mike went on to say that a predecessor told him to "try to secure the midday slot because after 40 minutes the Queen would ring a small bell and say, 'Time for a sherry I think'."

The Real Crown promises to be the jewel in the crown of ITV streaming platform ITVX's latest season.

The five-part series probes the facts behind many of the events chronicled in the hit Netflix dramatisation, such as Buckingham Palace intruder Michael Fagan and the IRA murder of Lord Mountbatten.

Among other key stories, it confirms how a clandestine meeting in a South London house paved the way for Camilla to finally marry Charles.

And it relates how the now disgraced Prince Andrew insisted on carting a six-foot ironing board around the globe while consistently "going off script" and refusing to carry out duties as a taxpayer-funded trade envoy.

Executive producer David Gover, of 72 Films, said: "It's a family where succession is known and there are issues with that. So even though the Queen was keen that both her grandsons should be sent to war because they had

Are your taxes done yet?

Are you like me and have been procrastinating over preparing and filing your taxes?

The deadline has alway been on or around April 15th. So why is that so many of us get to April 1st and act like it has been sprung on us like a surprise event?

The good news is that the government has given us a reprieve until October! This only affects certain counties within those states that were affected by the severe weather we experienced over the last few months. Fortunately (?) Los Angeles County falls under that umbrella. It really is a case of every cloud.... If you aren't certain which jurisdiction you fall under you can check at www.irs.gov this is also where you can seek free advice and utilize their tax clinics plus so many other resources to help with preparing and filing.

Don't forget FBAR

Every year I promise myself that next time I will have everything ready by the first week of March, but have never been able to follow through. Last year I circumvented the tax prep angst by filing for an extension well in advance of the looming deadline.

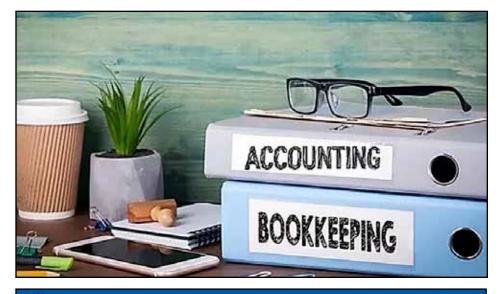

It's Time For Tea.... Traditional Afternoon Tea is now served Wed-Sat. 11.30am-4pm in our tea room (also available for baby showers, bridal showers and special occasions). King's Head Pies now available in our bakery. Sausage rolls, pastries and delicious cakes, baked daily

An extension allows taxpayers a six-month reprieve to get their accounts in order and whilst it doesn't cost anything, please keep in mind that it is not an extension to pay what you owe. A ballpark figure is fine. If your income hasn't changed much from the previous year you can base it on that. You will get a refund if you overpay and a penalty of approximately 5% if you underestimate.

green Like card holders, if you spend at least 183 days in the United States and are a holder of a nonimmigrant visa, you must file your taxes. In some case it is even recommended to do so if you had little or no income as you may be entitled to tax credits. Make sure to read up on the FBAR too - this is for reporting of foreign accounts. I've had a few Brits in LA members tell me they came unstuck by not being aware of the procedure and even worse hiring accountants and advisors who were ignorant of the laws too.

I pay a CPA to help prepare and file my tax return as I am fearful that I will make a mistake too. Why does just the thought of taxes cause so many of us to panic? I can understand that the likes of Jimmy Carr or Gary Barlow et al. might have just cause to be anxious, but the HMRC and IRS manage to make even the most law-abiding citizens quiver in their boots. As in the scheme of things paying our taxes should be a good thing and something to celebrate, as it provides so much for our society and infrastructure. So it makes no sense that we are all encouraged to despise it or feel like we are being tricked somehow. I suppose it doesn't really help when we see so many tax dollars wasted or areas that could do with a bigger allocation.

Brits in LA

Never gonna quiz you up...

There were first time champions at the latest Brits in LA Pub Quiz as Never Gonna Quiz You Up (pictured, below) took the garden gnome trophy.

Running the trio close at O'Briens on Tuesday night were The Cider Guy Rules (pictured, bottom) and a father and son team featuring Philip Battley, seen (right) explaining to young Arthur that the pint of Guinness he'd ordered was not actually a chocolate milkshake.

Join quizmaster Sandro Monetti at the Santa Monica boozer for more trivia fun next Tuesday, April 18. All welcome.

TAURUS: You should likely be feeling more positive; this is due to your lovely boss Venus beaming on your finances. Time to start your plan for a healthy new year starting next week.

GEMINI: This is a good time to catch up with unfinished business of any kind. Make a schedule and follow it as much as possible. It will be good to just focus on it one day at a time.

CANCER: Your moods can change quickly as a rule so it's good that Mars in your house is giving you a boost for a change. You have some stuff to finish up...so get it done.

LEO: You should be starting to feel more positive and ready to move forward in your life. However, be sure you don't overindulge; you should know by now to do everything in moderation.

VIRGO: Do not push too hard to move forward, although life is getting easier. Show your organized side to those that need the help. Don't overdo anything, keep some boundaries.

LIBRA: You can finally feel a little more like normal as your boss Venus is smiling on you from your cousin Gemini. Any plans you make now will actually come to pass. SCORPIO: You should be making space in your life to change your general routine, hopefully as soon as you can. "I fully assisted the FA with their investigation and have discussed the matter directly with Andy Robertson during an open and positive conversation," the match official added.

"It was certainly not my intention to make any contact with Andy as I pulled my arm away from him and for that I have apologised."

The FA said it had reached its decision after thoroughly reviewing

"Our comprehensive involved process detailed reviewing statements from Liverpool and PGMOL, as well as multiple angles of video footage, in relation to both the incident and its surrounding circumstances," an FA statement said.

Big "beast" Haaland hailed after Bayern demolition

Erling Haaland was a "monster" called and a "beast" as he the scoring broke record by a Premier League player in one season as Manchester City hammered Bayern Munich in the Champions League on Wednesday.

22-year-old The Norway striker (above) fired in City's third in their 3-0 quarter-final first-leg win to reach another landmark in his first season in English football.

That was his 45th goal for City this season, in just his 39th game, a record for a Premier League player in all competitions.

This was his sixth goal in eight games against German champions Bayern, having played them regularly with Borussia Dortmund, but he had never beaten them before.

"Every team has to fear this player because he is just a monster. He is a beast, congratulations to Manchester City for signing him," former Bayern and Germany striker Mario Gomez told BT Sport.

UNITED KEEP IT NERVY

Europa League: United let slip two goal lead to Sevilla

United Manchester conceded two own goals and lost Lisandro Martinez to a seriouslooking injury in the final six minutes against Sevilla to put their Europa League hopes in jeopardy.

United looked to be coasting to a quarterfinal first-leg victory Thursday might at Old Trafford thanks to Marcel Sabitzer's first-half double.

However, after Antony had hit the crossbar, Sevilla came back into the contest and profited from a terrible ending to the game for Erik ten Hag's men.

First Tyrell Malacia diverted the ball past David de Gea after former Manchester City man Jesus Navas had pulled a low cross back from the goalline.

Then, two minutes into injury time, Youssef En-Nesyri's off-target header struck Harry Maguire to leave De Gea helpless as it flew into the net.

The scoreline is bad enough as it leaves United facing a battle to secure the semi-final spot they seemed to have virtually sealed.

However, the loss of Martinez is a major concern, particularly as Raphael Varane had to be replaced at half-time.

Martinez had to be carried from the field by his Argentina team-mates Gonzalo Montiel and Marcos Acuna and then left for the dressing room on a stretcher in obvious pain after catching his foot in the turf with no opponent near him.

Having opted against replacing Marcus Rashford when his side were two goals up against Everton at the weekend and seeing the England man get injured, it was probably not a surprise when United boss Erik ten Hag took off key man Bruno Fernandes, plus Jadon Sancho and Anthony Martial after an hour.

At that point United had a healthy advantage, with Sabitzer profiting from excellent through balls from Fernandes and Martial and Ten Hag presumably reasoned it was a wise option not to take a risk with so many big games to come, knowing Fernandes is banned for the second leg anyway after he picked up another yellow card. But the decision allowed Sevilla to gain some momentum. United's goal came under threat and eventually, their lead disappeared. Arguably though, the extent of Martinez's injury is of more concern. The Argentine has been a rock at the heart of United's defence this season and, given the clear pain he was in as he sat sadly by the touchline waiting to be carried to the dressing rooms, there must be huge uncertainty over when he will play again, which could place his side's season under a threat that previously did not seem to exist.

Europa Conference: Honors even as Hammers draw in Belgium

West Ham remain well placed to make backto-back European semifinals despite seeing their $100\overline{\%}$ winning run in the Europa Conference League ended by Gent.

The Hammers looked on course to make it 11 wins out of 11 in Europe this season when Danny Ings tapped home after the hosts were caught out by a quickly taken throw-in.

David Moyes' side, Europa League semifinalists last season, had to soak up waves of pressure in an intense quarter-final first leg in Belgium and Gent equalised after a clever touch and finish by Hugo Cuypers.

"I didn't think the performance was good but the result was not a bad result," West Ham boss Moyes said.

"I think you will find everyone has worked really hard to be here and they don't want to give up a chance to make a semi-final."

The hosts piled forward in search of a winner to take into next week's return leg, with Gift Orban - who scored hat-trick in 205 а seconds in the last round - hitting the bar with a wonderful 82nd-minute acrobatic attempt.

There was drama deep in stoppage time when Gent's Kamil Piatkowski was shown a red card for bringing down substitute Lucas Paqueta, but it was overturned after the referee watched the incident again on the pitchside monitor.

In the end West Ham were relieved to emerge with a draw following a dramatic finish, which was capped by the red card that was quickly rescinded.

Quick on the counter, Gent caused problems throughout and the Hammers know they will have to play better when the teams meet again next Thursday at London Stadium.

"We're away from home, facing a strong crowd, and Gent played very well," added Moyes. "Hopefully we can show them a bit more about how we play when we see them next Thursday."

Moyes' side, however, will still be confident of finishing the job in front of their own fans.

They will be without Angelo Ogbonna for the return after the defender was booked soon after receiving lengthy treatment when he landed heavily on his back following an aerial challenge in the first half.
