LINEKER TOLD: PUT A SOCK IN IT!

■ Defence Secretary blasts MOTD presenter after his latest anti-government Tweet

Gary Lineker made the headlines again this week, with Defence Secretary Grant Shapps telling the Match of the Day presenter to “put a sock in it” and stop pushing his ‘anti-Tory agenda’ on social media.

The former England star earned praise and criticism in equal measure as he took a swipe at the minister on Twitter in a row over the Government’s Rwanda plan.

Mr Shapps said: “As a Christmas present to the nation it would be wonderful if Mr Lineker put a sock in it.”

It came as a TV chief tipped to become the new BBC chairman accused the former England striker of breaking impartiality guidelines.

Dr Samir Shah suggested Lineker may have breached corporation rules by using social media site X to taunt Mr Shapps. The former BBC politics boss also claimed Lineker’s public support for a letter opposing the Government’s Rwanda scheme for refugees was not “very helpful”.

The row follows years of controversy over Lineker’s attacks on the Tories and their policies in areas like immigration.

Critics claim the BBC’s top earner, with a salary of £1.35million, should be strictly bound by rules which bar stars from showing political bias. Former party chairman Sir Jake Berry accused the former Tottenham Hotspur, Everton and Barcelona star of straying into politics with his posts.

The Rossendale and Darwen MP said: “He’s a football commentator, so why are we constantly hearing about his views on politics?”

“grey area”

Former BBC director of television Danny Cohen called for Lineker to be sacked, saying he was now like a footballer with an out-of-control ego.

He said: “Mr Lineker is behaving as if he is much bigger than his club – the BBC – with the insolent inference there is nothing that his manager – the director-general – can or will do to stop him. If the BBC does nothing about it, its management looks ever weaker and ever less in control of the social media outpost of the people who represent it in the eyes of the public.”

TV executive Dr Shah was quizzed by the Commons culture committee on the issue on Wednesday. He said the sports presenter’s posts attacking Mr Shapps for allegedly using pseudonyms outside his main political work and a social media clash with MP Jonathan Gullis were a problem.

He added: “The more recent tweet where Mr Lineker identified two politicians does on the face of it seem to breach those particular guidelines. I’m not sure how egregious it is, but it does. I would imagine the BBC is now looking at that and considering its response.”

Dr Shah told the

committee that Lineker was not in breach of guidelines by signing a letter calling for the Government to scrap the Rwanda scheme. But he did not think the row “was very helpful, either for Gary Lineker or the BBC”.

Tory Lee Anderson said: “Mr Lineker seems to have a beef with my friend Jonathan Gullis, one of the hardest-working MPs in Westminster. Lineker needs to pipe down and keep his taxpayers-funded petty political opinions to himself.”

The twist is the latest in a saga sparked by Lineker’s tweets, which led to a review of guidelines by John Hardie, former editor-in-chief of ITN.

A BBC spokesman said: “While the guidance does allow people to talk about issues that matter to them, it is also clear that individuals should be civil and not call into question anyone’s character. We discuss issues that arise with presenters as necessary.”

PM sees off Rwanda plan rebels - for now

"The British people should decide who gets to come to this country – not criminal gangs or foreign courts." - Rishi Sunak

A DEFIANT Rishi Sunak has seen off a rebel plot to defeat his flagship Rwanda plan after a tense showdown in Parliament.

The Prime Minister's deportation Bill passed its first Commons hurdle on Tuesday despite a group of hardline Conservatives abstaining from the vote at the last minute.

However a source said the Bill "will be killed" next month unless there are amendments.

Mr Sunak pushed ahead with the vote after a 24-hour charm offensive won over enough wavering MPs to get a comfortable majority of 44.

He said: "The British people should decide who gets to come to this country – not criminal gangs or foreign courts. That's what this Bill delivers. We will now work to make it law so that we can get flights going to Rwanda and stop the boats."

Home Secretary James Cleverly said: "Parliament has spoken. We must be able to choose who comes to our country – not criminal gangs."

But a Tory rebel source issued a stark warning to the PM, saying: "This Bill has been allowed to live another day.

"But without amendments it will be killed next month.

"It's now up to the Government to decide what it wants to do."

Just minutes before voting began, right-wing factions with concerns about the legislation announced they would abstain instead of vote against the proposal.

But the faction leaders warned they will try to torpedo the legislation in its final stages unless significant changes are made.

legal challenges

Mark Francois, chairman of the European Research Group, said if the Bill remains unamended "we reserve the right to vote against it at third reading".

But centrist MPs have indicated they will oppose the plan if they believe it has been toughened up too much.

It leaves the PM with around a month to find a way to keep the legislation alive, when MPs will get the chance to amend the proposals.

Mr Sunak hopes the Safety of Rwanda Bill will revive his stalled deportation plan by blocking legal challenges made on the claim that Rwanda is unsafe. It would allow ministers to disapply the Human Rights Act, but does not go as far as overriding the European Convention on Human Rights.

Mr Sunak held an hour-long breakfast summit with potential rebels from the New Conservatives group, including deputy Tory chairman Lee Anderson, Miriam Cates and Danny Kruger.

Mr Kruger later told the Commons he could not support the Bill as it was "unsatisfactory" and called for legislation that "respects parliamentary sovereignty".

The vote was feared to be on such a knife-edge that MPs who had been given permission to be away from Parliament were ordered back to Westminster.

'sophistry'

They included climate minister Graham Stuart, who was forced to return from the COP28 summit in Dubai to vote before then returning to the talks – in a 6,824-mile round trip.

No Tory MPs voted against the Bill, but 38 did not take part in the vote, although this does not automatically equate to

critics warn the PM's Rwanda deportation bill will be 'killed' next month an abstention.

Tory MPs who recorded no vote included former Home Secretary Suella Braverman, former immigration minister Robert Jenrick, former cabinet minister Sir Simon Clarke, Mr Francois and Ms Cates and Mr Kruger from the New Conservatives group.

MPs clashed in the Commons over six hours of stormy debate over the legislation. Mr Jenrick, who had quit in protest at the Bill, accused the Government of "sophistry" in the claims being made about the powers it will introduce.

He said ministers must have the "full power of Parliament" to ignore injunctions from the European Court of Human Rights, but warned the legislation will not make that happen.

Mr Jenrick suggested the measures it contains allowing the UK to ignore interim injunctions from the European Court of Human Rights are deceptive.

He said it was "inevitable" the Strasbourg court would impose more restrictions on deportations.

Mr Jenrick told the Commons: "The provision in the Bill is sophistry."

Conservative former cabinet minister David

Jones, deputy chairman of the European Research Group, said there were "numerous deficiencies" in the Bill that would render it "inoperable and ineffective".

Sir Bob Neill, chairman of the Commons justice committee, backed the proposal but warned that he would withdraw his support in the future if changes from the Tory right were accepted.

Most of the leading political reporters were scathing about Sunak's pandering his party's fringe, with The Economist opining that "a bad law to deliver a bad policy is too high a price for Tory unity".

Boy missing for six years found in France

A 17-year-old English boy from Oldham who went missing in Spain in 2017 has been found in France, authorities say.

The teenager, answering to the name of Alex Batty (right), was found in the town of Revel east of Toulouse early on Wednesday morning.

Six years ago, Alex, then 11, was on holiday with his mother and grandfather when they

Bulger killer loses latest parole bid

JAMES Bulger's murderer Jon Venables must stay behind bars after losing his latest plea for parole.

A Parole Board panel on Wednesday ruled the 41-year-old paedophile still poses a danger to the public as it rejected his claims that he was "completely rehabilitated".

Venables and Robert Thompson were jailed for life for torturing and killing two-year-old James after snatching him in Bootle, Merseyside when they were just 10 in 1993.

The pair were released on licence with new identities in 2001, but Venables was returned to jail in 2010 and again in 2017 for possessing indecent images of children.

He previously tried for parole in 2020, and before his latest bid was rejected on this week James's mum Denise Fergus said the idea of him going free terrified her.

Welcoming the decision, Denise, 54, hailed it a "day to celebrate".

Her spokeswoman Kym Morris – chair of the James Bulger Memorial Trust – said: "The prospect of him coming out was terrifying as we knew he'd harm again. We thank the Parole Board for making the correct decision."

Venables had been granted a private parole hearing after it was ruled it would "harm his mental health" if it took place in public, and also to protect his new identity. However, he did not attend in person.

The closed hearing was told he claimed to be "reformed" and "no danger" to the public.

But the Parole Board said: "We can confirm a panel of the Parole Board refused the release of Jon Venables following a hearing. Parole Board decisions are solely focused on what risk a prisoner could represent to the public if released and whether that risk is manageable in the community."

disappeared in Spain.

A police source said Alex had been taken to a police station by a concerned motorist.

The boy said he had been in France for two years, the police source said, adding that he bore a resemblance to the last known picture of Alex.

He was in good health and did not say he had been mistreated in any way.

The prosecutor's office in Toulouse confirmed the identity to the BBC, stating: "It is the missing child. The family have confirmed it."

His grandmother - and legal guardian - Susan Caruana told reporters that she believed Alex's mother Melanie Batty and grandfather David Batty had taken him to live with a spiritual community in Morocco.

She said they were seeking an alternative lifestyle and did not want Alex to go to school.

A local journalist said a delivery driver had spotted the boy walking along a road in the foothills of the Pyrenees, carrying a backpack and skateboard and, feeling sorry for him, picked him up.

"They spent three hours together in the car, and the boy told his story," Remi Buhagiar of La Depeche newspaper said.

"He said he'd been living in a kind of itinerant commune. He wasn't under any compulsion but he said he found his mother a bit weird and

HASTILY WITHDRAWN: the offending sweater

Lockerbie locals unite against 'offensive' Pan Am sweater

■ £36 Christmas jumper withdrawn by High Street retailer Next after local uproar

LOCKERBIE locals have forced high street retailer Next to withdraw a Pan Am Christmas jumper they claimed was "offensive" to victims of the bombing horror.

More than 1,000 locals signed a petition in just one day, demanding the removal of the garment bearing the airline's logo.

Pan Am's Flight 103 was destroyed over the Scottish town on December 21, 1988, when a bomb exploded on board – with 270 people killed.

The £36 jumper was branded "offensive", "disrespectful" and "shocking".

Phil Geddes, 39, who launched the petition on campaign site Change.org, said: "I was only five but the disaster is my earliest memory.

"I remember the noise of the plane, my brother hiding under the bed and us running outside and seeing a fireball in the sky.

"There are people in my town who found bodies and I know people who are still terrified of flying because of it."

Phil, a HGV parts manager, added: "I was surprised by the response – I thought I might be overreacting a wee bit."

Many of those who signed the petition have personal connections to the tragic event.

One person wrote: "I worked at the local hospital the night of the disaster and it's as fresh in my mind 35 years later as it was back then."

Another said: "I attended Lockerbie Academy and this is repulsive. I lost a friend on Flight 103. This is beyond distasteful."

A third commented: "As a former resident of Lockerbie, this is disgraceful."

Pan Am was an American airline that operated from 1927 to 1991, ultimately filing for bankruptcy. A Next spokesperson confirmed last night the item had been "removed from the market place".

Labrador remains nation's most-loved dog

THEY are known for being loyal and loveable so it's no surprise that the Labrador retriever has been named Britain's favourite dog breed.

Labradors were closely followed in a survey by cocker spaniels and cockapoos, while Jack Russell terriers, border collies and Staffordshire bull terriers also made the top 10.

The Dogs Trust quizzed 244,000 owners who gave information about almost 350,000 animals.

The National Dog Survey also revealed the top name choices.

Most popular for female dogs was Poppy, followed by Bella and Luna, with Alfie, Charlie and Milo topping the table for males. Willow, Lola, Buddy and Barney were in the top

No matter the color, Labrador Retrievers are elegant, classic dogs

10. The findings come from largest UK canine "census" of its type.

Owen Sharp, Dogs Trust chief executive, said: "It's clear that dogs are important members of the family, so it comes as no surprise that almost a quarter of a million people shared information about their dogs with us.

"The information will help us to shape our services and support owners to do their best for pets."

The trust has 21 rehoming centres and last year placed over 10,000 dogs.

Tropical diseases 'could become the norm'

■ Rising temperatures likely to bring Dengue Fever and Zika virus to UK, experts warn Rising global temperatures could make tropical diseases the norm in Britain over the next few decades, scientists warned this week.

The UK Health Security Agency predicts a future in which heat and cold-related deaths soar and new mosquito species invade carrying potentially deadly viruses.

Asian tiger mosquitos can carry the dengue, chikungunya and zika viruses. All cause severe fever, aches and joint pain.

In a plausible worst-case scenario where temperatures rise by over 4°C, UKHSA warns the tiger mosquito could become established in most of England by the 2040s and 2050s.

London could see regular transmission of dengue by 2060.

Dr Jolyon Medlock, from UKHSA, said other European countries had already seen these mosquitos arrive via imported goods.

He explained: "Look at what's happening in France. There have been a small number of dengue cases each year in the Mediterranean. But this year, we've seen just over 100 cases in parts of Italy and France.

"A Mediterranean climate is very much where we might be in 30 or 40 years."

Professor Dame Jenny Harries, UKHSA chief executive, said its report was to help policymakers and health chiefs prepare for possible impacts of climate change.

The agency is already considering which vaccines may be needed and is working to ensure access to them.

Dame Jenny added: "Things that, when I trained many years ago, were called tropical diseases will actually become national domestic diseases so GP training needs to change."

Other major risks include increased flooding and extreme hot and cold weather. A 4C rise in average temperatures could lead to numbers exposed to flooding more than doubling by 2080. Supplies of fruit and vegetables imported from countries most vulnerable to the impact of climate change could also become volatile.

The UK recorded above 40C for the first time last summer, resulting in almost 3,000 excess deaths.

Analysis found temperatures were likely to rise until at least mid-century, regardless of de-carbonisation. By then, adults now of working age will be over 65, a group at risk from extreme weather.

Heat-linked deaths could more than double by the 2030s and increase by over 1,000% by 2070, said the report.

Meanwhile, cold-related deaths are also projected to rise before declining by the middle of the century.

Heat-related mortality linked to climate change has been estimated to cost the NHS £6.8billion per year, and experts warned this could rise to £14.7billion annually in the 2050s.

Dame Jenny said the report was not "all doom and gloom" and many of the health effects were avoidable if the UK cuts greenhouse gas and mitigates threats.

Examples include improving flood defences and housing design, protecting those most at risk from extreme weather, and measures to detect mosquitos at ports.

Dr Lea Berrang Ford, head of the UKHSA's Centre for Climate and Health Security, said: "There are significant opportunities for solutions that can combat climate change and improve health.

"Decisions we make today will determine the severity and extent of climate impacts inherited by today's youth and their children."

Noddy: I was a little merry when I penned classic Xmas hit

■ Slade's Merry Xmas Everybody released 50 years ago

NODDY Holder says he did indeed get a little merry before writing Christmas classic Merry Xmas Everybody.

To mark 50 years since he penned it, the Slade frontman has told the true story behind his beloved song.

Released in 1973, his hit still dominates the airwaves in November and December.

Noddy, 77, admits a few glasses of whisky after a trip to the pub helped him finish it.

Speaking to the in-house magazine of PRS for Music, a British music copyright collective, he said: "The idea for a Christmas song came from [co-writer] Jimmy Lea's auntie, who suggested we do a perennial-type song like Happy Birthday.

"The song that became Merry Xmas Everybody was written in 1967. It was hippy-trippy and the chorus went: 'So won't you buy me a rocking chair to watch the world go by / Buy me a looking glass to look me in the eye-eye-eye...'

'few drinks'

"Anyway, one night in 1973 I was at my parents' in the Midlands. After a few drinks down the local the whisky came out and I rewrote that song in two hours, using the same music for the chorus but changing the words and adding the verses. I wanted to paint a picture of a working-class Christmas.

"I played it to Jim and he didn't really say much but I knew he secretly liked it.

"We cut it in the US at the end of the hot summer of 1973. The studio was in an office block and we sang the chorus in the stairwell to get that echoey effect.

"Four English blokes singing about Christmas...the office workers must have thought us mad!

"We played it to Polydor, and they flipped. It sold one million in the first week."

Covered many times, it became the band's sixth UK No.1. In 2009, PRS for Music announced up to 42% of the world's population could have heard it.

Noddy calls the song his pension and in 2015 it was estimated to generate £500,000 of royalties every year.

Jab Prince pays £138m for year's priciest pad

A mansion has become the most expensive residence sold in the capital this year, with a sale agreed for £138million.

The price of the Grade II-listed Aberconway House near Hyde Park was the second highest ever in London.

It was agreed by self-proclaimed "prince of vaccines" Adar Poonawalla, 42, the boss of Serum Institute of India, the world's largest jab producer.

The five-storey, 23,000sq ft house in Mayfair, Central London, is being sold by Dominika Kulczyk, daughter of the late businessman Jan Kulczyk, who was Poland's richest man.

The property will be bought by Serum Life Sciences, the UK arm of all AstraZeneca Covid injections.

SII also makes vaccines against polio, diphtheria, tetanus, hepatitis B and measles.

Mr Poonawalla was educated at St Edmund's

School in Canterbury and the University of Westminster.

In 2021 his family was India's sixth richest, with an estimated £12billion fortune, according to the Times of India.

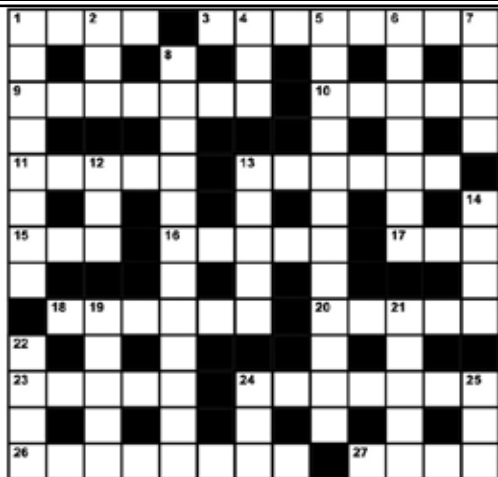

A source said the house would be a base for the company and family while in the UK.

London's priciest house is 2-8a Rutland Gate, Knightsbridge, sold in 2020 by the estate of former Saudi crown prince Sultan bin Abdulaziz for £210million.

Christmas in the UK

2000 years on, Chester still celebrates its Saturnalia

■ Cheshire town holds fast to its Roman roots with festival celebrating farming and harvest

December brings festivities to many of England's cities, but for one, it is a chance to rejoice in more than one set of 2,000-year-old celebrations.

Every year, a week or so before Christmas, Chester's streets are filled with the same sights, sounds and smells that have marked Saturnalia in the city since its days as the Roman city of Deva Victrix.

The festival, which English Heritage (EH) said honoured Saturn, the Roman god of farming and harvest, was one of the ancient empire's most popular celebrations.

EH said it was originally a single-day event on 17 December, but its popularity saw the festivities stretch over time and eventually last until 23 December.

'very proud'

The organisation said Romans usually adhered to "very strict societal rules, and everyone knew their place", but during Saturnalia, the rules were "set aside, and even slaves, who had hard lives with little time off, could relax and have fun".

It saw gift-giving and excessive eating and drinking, traditions that continued when it was replaced by Christmas after the fall of the Roman Empire, but in Chester, which was once Rome's largest fortress in Britain, more of it has survived into modern times.

Roman Tours manager Cellan Harston, who helps put on the city's Saturnalia parade, said it was important to "reflect Chester's history".

"Chester is well known for its Roman heritage and local people are very proud of that heritage," he said.

However, he said keeping the Roman celebration alive was about more than just history.

He said Saturnalia "was a chance to release chaos on the world" and the modern procession, held as part of the city's Winter Watch parade, was a "spectacle that represents that chaos".

Chester West and Chester councillor Lisa Denson said the procession, which will pass the city's Roman amphitheatre, sees an official ceremony that includes the lighting of torches and the handing out of "gifts of light".

She said it was a chance to relive Chester's past while also looking to its future.

"Chester is a Roman city and Saturnalia offers the opportunity to combine the modern-day Christmas celebrations with an acknowledgement to our Roman history," she said.

Roman soldiers marching through the city centre always attracts the crowds, [who enjoy it when] the soldiers light their flaming torches and share the light by handing out glow sticks."

'sense of tradition'

Dr Caroline Pudney, a senior archaeology lecturer at the University of Chester, said keeping Saturnalia alive in the city was about "maintaining a sense of tradition and bringing the past to life".

She said the historic festival was "a time of merriment, with people engaging in activities such as feasting, gambling, and exchanging small gifts" and its traditions, which would have been celebrated by the members of the 20th Legion, are echoed in today's Christmas festivities.

"Soldiers here in Chester would likely have honoured the Saturnalia

Cellan Harston (right), who helps put on the city's famous Saturnalia parade, said it was important to 'reflect Chster's history' and particularly welcomed the fact that it would have afforded them some days off," she said.

"The festival also involved the decoration of homes with greenery, such as wreaths and branches, and the lighting of candles and Saturnalia finished with the Sigillaria, a day of present giving, a bit like Christmas Day."

However, she added that the modern Saturnalia proceedings were not quite the same as the Roman ones, as Chester now celebrated "in a way that combines the Roman festival with the vibrant tradition of the city's medieval parades and processions".

But one moment does link it intrinsically to Rome, as the parade always begins with an actor voicing the words of Domitian, who was emperor when Deva Victrix was founded.

"Let none of you be mistaken, the Romans are still here, at certain times of the year you will see us marching once more through our fortress," he tells the crowd.

"Remember who and what I am.

"I am a sword that sings in the dark. I am the sound of a legion marching to war.

"I am the axe that thuds into your skull. I am accuser, judge and executioner.

"I am Emperor. I am a living god. I am Caesar. I am Rome."

Euro exit 'could spell disaster' for United Manchester United could struggle to attract the world's best players and slide deeper into crisis following their shambolic Champions League exit this week.

That is the view of their former first-team coach Rene Meulensteen.

United missed out on Harry Kane and Declan Rice in the summer, with Erik ten Hag settling for alternative targets who have been nowhere near as effective.

Meulensteen told talkSport: "The biggest thing now with this massive disappointment of going out of the Champions League – and Europe in total – is you need to think about the knock-on effect it could have.

"If they don't make Europe again, which players are you going to attract? People say the Glazers have backed the managers. But have they actually backed them with the players the managers want?

"Everybody knows that if United had got Kane, you bring 25 to 30 goals a season into your team.

"The problem United have at the moment is that they went for Rasmus Hojlund. I thought he was way short against those [Bayern] defenders and never really got a kick.

"But the problem is he's flanked by two individual players [Alejandro Garnacho and Antony] who have no intention of giving him any kind of service, because they want to create things for themselves. So there's an imbalance, and that imbalance is going forward. But it's also going back, in terms of the defensive shape."

Former United defender Jaap Stam warned Ten Hag must find a way to get his current crop inside if United are to salvage anything from the current campaign.

Stam said: "He has got to be worried and thinking about what's going to happen now because you can ban players. But it's also about man management of course and how to work with and handle players. There was the [Cristiano] Ronaldo thing, the [Jadon] Sancho thing, Raphael Varane probably – I don't know if something's happened over there.

"There's the thing with the press now and banning journalists from press conferences.

"You need to have peace and quiet. You need to fully focus, and you don't want to talk about players or what players think about you."

Brighton's Pedro celebrates 'best moment'

Joao Pedro said scoring an 88th-minute winner to help Brighton advance to the Europa League last 16 stage "was the best moment" of his life.

Victory was needed to leapfrog their opponents Marseille and finish first in Group B, as well as to avoid having to navigate the Europa League knockout play-off round.

It looked as if Roberto De Zerbi's side would be held to a drab goalless draw on the South Coast on Thursday,, before Pedro picked up the ball in Marseille's box, expertly created space for himself and then drove a shot into the top corner.

Pedro is the top scorer in the Europa League this season with six goals in six group matches and celebrated wildly with the home supporters after his late winner.

"I'm very happy, these are the best moments of my life," Pedro told TNT Sports. "Thank you to my team-mates, they always support me.

"I'm very happy to be top scorer in the Europa League. To be top of the table, in the league or top scorer, you need to keep going through hard work."

Victory means Brighton will next be in European action in March 2024. The first legs of the play-offs will be played on 15 February 2024, with the second legs on 22 February.

The draw for the round of 16 will be held on 23 February, with the first legs played on 7 March and the second legs taking place on 14 March.

Marseille will also be in the knockout play-off round and face a side who finished third in the Champions League group stages.

Brighton manager De Zerbi was equally joyous at full-time.

"I lost my voice, I lost everything," he said. "It was an amazing game.

We deserved to reach the top of the table.

"This is the best moment in my time [here]. We will play two games less. We want to dream. We want to prepare for that game for our best to win another step."

Having started the final round of group matches one point behind Marseille, only a win for Brighton would have helped them avoid a potentially difficult play-off tie.

Liverpool youngsters fall in Belgium

Already-qualified Liverpool ended their Europa League group campaign with an away defeat in Belgium against Union Saint-Gilloise on Thursday night.

Jürgen Klopp's youthful Reds side fell behind in the 32nd minute when Mohamed Amoura scored after taking the ball around goalkeeper Caoimhin Kelleher.

Twenty-year-old centre-half Jarell Quansah equalised with a powerful effort from inside the penalty area for his first Liverpool goal.

But the hosts regained the lead just before half-time thanks to Cameron Puertas' low strike, which proved to be the winner.

Puertas thought he had scored again with another well-struck shot but the goal was disallowed for handball following a video assistant referee check.

Despite the loss, Liverpool win Group E with 12 points from their six games, while Belgian league leaders Union Saint-Gilloise finished third to drop down into the Europa Conference League play-offs, in February.

Premier League Liverpool will not play another European fixture until the last 16 in March and can focus on other competitions.

They now have three vital home games - Manchester United in the Premier League on Sunday, West Ham in the Carabao Cup quarter-finals on Wednesday and then Arsenal in the league on 23 December.

Villa:

Moreno had pulled the ball back to him 10 yards out.

The introduction of captain McGinn in the second period gave Villa an immediate lift and the Scotland midfielder's precise 61st-minute delivery from the left allowed Zaniolo to control and turn the ball home from six yards out.

It was his first goal for the club since joining on loan from Galatasaray in the summer.

Battling Rangers take Real scalp

Resilient Rangers prevailed in an absorbing 3-2 Europa League thriller with Real Betis on Thursday night to top the group and progress to the competition's last 16.

The Scottish Premiership side thundered into the lead thanks to a belting finish from Abdallah Sima, before Juan Miranda's arrowed strike almost immediately restored parity for the Spanish hosts.

After withstanding severe pressure in Seville, Cyriel Dessers came alive to restore the visitors' lead, but another equaliser from Ayoze Perez capped an incredible first half.

With Sparta Prague strolling to victory against Aris Limassol, Philippe Clement knew his side needed a winner, which came with 12 minutes left as substitute Kemar Roofe forced the ball home to spark celebratory scenes.

The cauldron of the Estadio Benito Villamarin could easily have daunted a Rangers side that knew victory was a likely necessity, but the bold visitors cut through the noise in an instant to strike first.

Sima has shown ruthlessness like no other player in blue this season, and did so again by thumping the ball out of the path of a flailing Dessers to send the travelling support wild.

Their celebrations would be curtailed in stunning fashion, though, as Betis immediately reminded Rangers of their quality when Miranda's lashed finished threatened to burst the side-netting.

Rangers were soon under more pressure and just when it looked as if Clement's side were becoming swamped, two of their struggling signings combined to push against the pressure.

Jose Cifuentes' outrageous reverse pass found Dessers, who skpped past two Betis bodies and rolled the ball through the legs of Rui Silva.

The hosts would soon retort in style again. Isco, who has been rejuvenated to his gracious best, danced on the edge of the box before feeding Perez. One gorgeous sweep of a boot later and this game of madness was once again level.

But there was always a sense that Rangers would have one more chance to save their status in the competition.

It was far from pretty, but Rabbi Matondo's fresh air swing allowed the ball to roll towards Roofe, who was in the right place at right time to rubberstamp Rangers' ticket to the last 16.

a shot tipped on to the bar on 68 minutes as the Toon regained some momentum.

The scoreboard showed PSG had scored. All over. Then it was disallowed. Cheers! A campaign in the balance.

A winner was needed. Rafael Leao went clear through, but fluffed his shot onto the post. Drama. Then disappointment. The last word went to Milan and Howe must regroup to stop this season spiralling further downward.

TYNE SLIDE!

Over and out for Howe's boys after 2-1 home loss to Milan

FOR 59 minutes, Wednesday evening looked like being one European night of Newcastle's history.

Joelinton's goal and a place in the last 16 was in their hands.

Then another 'if only' story, another near miss, to add to the growing list.

Newcastle is a club climbing the ladder of the elite rapidly and not looking out of place...but also not getting the job done.

See also the Carabao Cup final last season. Or the Paris Saint-Germain game two weeks ago.

The story of the Toon's Champions League return will be one of adventure and encouragement for the future, but also of regrets. Substitute Samuel Chukwueze's 84th-minute goal not only ended their chance of staying in the Champions League. It dumped the Magpies out of Europe altogether.

Eddie Howe's call for a magical European night and for the St James' crowd to be at their noisiest, was answered for the first hour. The build-up was electric. A giant banner reading: "It's not beyond our wildest dreams, because we did have wild dreams," summed up ambition. Newcastle were in control early on. Enough flaws in Milan's form and confidence were appearing to give Newcastle renewed hope after shipping seven goals and losing their past two Premier League games.

They deserved to take the lead through their Brazilian hardman Joelinton. He missed the early games of the campaign through injury, but made up for it with a thumping half-volley in the 33rd minute.

He exchanged passes with Gordon and smashed into the top corner. It was Joelinton's third of the season and second in four days. His celebration was reminiscent of Eric Cantona, standing still and looking round at the crowd soaking it in. Then he sprinted to the bench and celebrated with Howe.

The Italians looked a shadow of the team who

THE SPIRIT WAS WILLING...but the flesh was weak Wednesday night dominated in the San Siro, but got a foothold after the break.

At this stage Newcastle had what they needed. Elsewhere Dortmund scored, to a Toon ovation as news spread. Then PSG pulled one back and it was all in the balance.

But then all the miles in the Newcastle legs started to show, they dropped off the pace just a tad, and Christian Pulisic struck for the visitors. Suddenly the scoreline in Germany became irrelevant. Yunus Musah crossed from the left, Newcastle failed to clear and Olivier Giroud nudged a deft lay-off to Pulisic to finish from close range.

But with the home crowd roaring them on, the Toon rejected playing it safe to ensure third place and a Europa League spot and instead chased the glory of a winning goal. It was high-wire football drama in the final half-hour, with both teams hitting the woodwork before it was all settled six minutes from time.

Villa clinch top spot with battling draw

Aston Villa clinched top spot in Group E on Thursday and their place in the last 16 of the Europa Conference League with a 1-1 draw at Zrinjski Mostar.

Nicolo Zaniolo's placed effort from substitute John McGinn's second-half cross appeared to have given Villa victory in Bosnia.

However, Matija Malekinusic's curling late effort ensured a nervy finale for the visitors who dominated early on.

Villa finished a point clear of Legia Warsaw, with Zrinjski bottom.

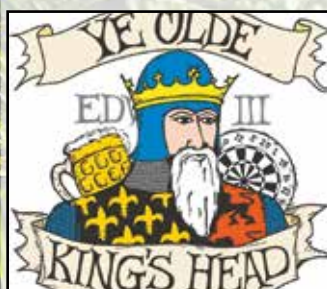

Unai Emery's side travelled to Bosnia-Herzegovina for what looked a routine assignment of securing a point against a side that had scored just once in the competition since defeating AZ Alkmaar in their opening game.

And while the Spaniard made eight changes to his starting XI with an eye on Sunday's Premier League trip to Brentford, they dominated possession but wasted two excellent opportunities to break the deadlock in an otherwise uneventful first half.

Italy midfielder Zaniolo lifted an early effort over the crossbar before the club's record signing Moussa Diaby miskicked after Alex
