Time to beef up our military, says Rishi

■ Sunak promises billions more on defence spending with 2.5% of GDP the target

Rishi Sunak has promised billions more for defence to counter threats from “an axis of authoritarian states”.

The prime minister said UK military spending would rise to 2.5% of national income by 2030, in a move that hardens a previous spending pledge.

He stressed the UK was “not on the brink of war” but claimed the extra money would put the country’s defence industry “on a war footing”.

Labour is also committed to a 2.5% target, when economic conditions allow.

Making the defence announcement during a visit to Poland, Mr Sunak said the UK was facing the most dangerous international environment since the days of the Cold War between the West and the former Soviet Union.

The investment was required because the UK was facing an “axis of authoritarian states with different values to ours,” including Russia, Iran, North Korea, and China, he said.

These countries, he argued, were showing a “new assertiveness” and were increasingly working together.

political dimension

It represents a significant increase in UK defence spending, but it will not change the size of the UK armed forces or reverse cuts to the size of the army.

Defence sources say it will enable the UK to build up its own stockpiles of ammunition, especially of artillery shells and missiles.

One lesson from the war in Ukraine is that most Nato nations would run out very quickly if they were involved in a war.

The additional funding will also help resource Ministry of Defence programmes already under way - such as an order for new frigates, the development of a new fighter jet, and the modernisation of Britain’s nuclear weapons systems.

These programmes are proving to be very expensive and the MoD has been struggling to make ends meet on its existing resources.

But there is also clearly a political dimension to this extra cash injection, ahead of a general election.

There has been no clear distance between Labour and the Conservatives on defence spending, with both committed to 2.5% of GDP when the economy allows.

Now the Conservatives have set a specific date, but with no guarantee that they will still be in power.

Sunak said the extra money would put the country’s defence industry “on a war footing”.

Horror knife attack at Welsh school

A 13-year-old girl has been charged with three counts of attempted murder, after two teachers and a pupil were stabbed at a secondary school in Wales.

The three people injured in the attack at Amman Valley School in Carmarthenshire on Wednesday morning have now left hospital, where they were treated for knife wounds.

Two air ambulances were sent to the school, also known as Ysgol Dyffryn Aman, as emergency services swarmed the scene.

Parents waited for several hours at the gates of the school, which was “in lockdown”, before tearfully being reunited with their children as the school day ended.

The teachers injured are reported to be Fiona Elias, the deputy head, and Liz Hopkin, a special-needs teacher. In a statement on the school website, headteacher James Durbridge praised staff and pupils for their “calm and mature response” to the lockdown.

Plaid Cymru’s Adam Price – a former pupil at the school – described it as a “centre point for the whole community” and said pupils and families have been “shocked and shaken”.

The 13-year-old girl charged with attempted murder after two teachers and a pupil were stabbed at a school in south Wales will appear at court on Friday, the Crown Prosecution Service has said.

Former Unionist leader charged with sex offences

■ ex-DUP boss Donaldson and his wife appear in Newry court

Former Democratic Unionist Party (DUP) leader Sir Jeffrey Donaldson has appeared in court charged with rape and 10 other historical sex offences.

His wife, Lady Eleanor Donaldson, a co-accused in the case, faces four charges.

The offences are alleged to have occurred between 1985 and 2006 and involve two alleged victims.

The pair were arrested at their home on 28 March and charged by police after a day of questioning.

Neither Sir Jeffrey nor Lady Donaldson have responded publicly to the charges.

However, the BBC understands Sir Jeffrey had written to the party saying he would be strenuously contesting the charges.

Sir Jeffrey, 61, who remains MP for Lagan Valley, quit as party leader with immediate effect.

Gavin Robinson was appointed as the party's interim leader.

He appeared at Newry Magistrates' Court on Wednesday facing 11 charges - one of rape;

one of gross indecency

involving a child; and nine counts of indecent assault.

The charges against his 58-year-old wife are connected to aiding and abetting his alleged offences.

There was a huge media presence outside the entrance to the court as Sir Jeffrey arrived; they were taking pictures and some shouted questions.

When the hearing began, the couple stood together in the dock, separated by a custody officer.

Both stood up when the charges against them

SIR JEFFREY DONALDSON: The offences he is charged with are alleged to have occurred between 1985 and 2006 were read out.

They spoke only to confirm their names and dates of birth, and to say they understood the charges.

A detective sergeant told the court that the police believe they can connect both accused to the charges.

Neither defendant was asked to formally enter a plea, as is usual in a first court appearance - that will happen at a later stage of proceedings.

They were each released on £350 bail on condition that they can have contact with each other, but not with any prosecution witnesses.

The case was next listed for 22 May, but neither accused has to appear in court on that date.

Humza Yousaf on verge of ouster

■ Scottish Greens remove support from embattled First Minister

The Scottish Greens have said they will vote against First Minister and SNP leader Humza Yousaf when he faces a motion of no-confidence this week.

The move came on Thursday after he ended the power-sharing agreement between the parties.

The Greens said they no longer believed the Scottish government would do the right thing for climate and nature policies.

Former first minister and SNP leader, Alex Salmond, said Mr Yousaf was in a "very precarious position".

The vote could come as early as next Wednesday and the Greens' decision means Mr Yousaf could struggle to win the motion, which was tabled by Scottish Conservative leader Douglas Ross.

The breakdown of MSPs in the parliament means former SNP MSP

Ash Regan, who is now an Alba Party MSP, could potentially decide Mr Yousaf's fate. The Alba Party is a Scottish nationalist and pro-independence political party launched by former first minister Alex Salmond in 2021.

If every Conservative, Labour and Liberal Democrat MSP joins the Greens in voting against Mr Yousaf it would give them 64 votes to the SNP's 63.

The result would then depend upon which way Ms Regan decided to vote.

Ms Regan, who ran for the leadership of the SNP against Mr Yousaf, later left the party over its policies on gender recognition reforms.

Alex Salmond said Mr Yousaf had made Ms Regan the "most powerful MSP in the Scottish Parliament".

Mr Salmond said

Mr Yousaf has been in power for less than a year the first minister had managed to annoy every opposition party in Holyrood.

He said Ms Regan cont. on page 3, col. 2

Scots to abolish 'not proven' verdict

The controversial not proven verdict is to be scrapped in Scottish courts as part of sweeping reforms to the country's justice system.

The measures will also see the number of jurors in criminal trials reduced from 15 to 12.

And a pilot will be held that would see rape and attempted rape trials be held without a jury.

Not proven is one of three verdicts that can be returned in Scotland, alongside guilty and not guilty.

The implications of a case being found not proven are exactly the same as not guilty and the accused is innocent in the eyes of the law.

Critics of the verdict also say it can stigmatise an accused person by appearing not to completely clear them and that it can fail to provide closure for victims.

However some legal experts believe it can offer additional protection to an accused person by helping to ensure that they will not be convicted if the jury has any doubts.

And the Law Society of Scotland has warned there could be an increase in miscarriages of justice if not proven is scrapped.

Not proven is unique to Scots law, with other legal systems only having two possible verdicts rather than three, and discussions about whether or not to keep it have been going on for years.

The general perception among the public is often that a "not proven" verdict suggests a sheriff or jury believes the accused is guilty, but does not have sufficient evidence to convict.

Tributes flow for former Labour minister Frank Field

■ Long-serving MP dedicated Westminster career to tackling social issues including child poverty and modern slavery

Tributes from across the political spectrum have been paid to the former Labour minister and welfare campaigner Frank Field, who has died at the age of 81.

Lord Field, who dedicated his career in Westminster to tackling social issues, including child poverty and modern slavery, served as an MP for 40 years.

Messages of support came from across the political divide, with praise for “a man of often uncomfortable principle” with an “unwavering moral compass”.

In 2021, he revealed he had been diagnosed with terminal cancer when his speech was read out in the House of Lords to support a change in the law on assisted dying.

Field was one of the longest-serving MPs in the Commons, only losing his seat in the 2019 general election after forming his own party.

Tony Blair, under whose government Field served as welfare reform minister, said: “Frank had integrity, intelligence and deep commitment to the causes he believed in. He was an independent thinker never constrained by conventional wisdom, but always pushing at the frontier of new ideas.

“Even when we disagreed, I had the utmost respect for him as a colleague and a character. Whether in his work on child poverty or in his time devoted to the reform of our welfare system, he stood up and stood out for the passion and insight he brought to any subject.”

‘wise counsel’

The former home secretary Priti Patel wrote on X: “Frank was a kind and compassionate man and a great parliamentarian. His unwavering moral compass, commitment to working cross-party and unshakable principles defined him and will be greatly missed.”

The shadow health secretary, Wes Streeting, described Field as “a great parliamentarian, crusader for social justice and source of wise counsel”. He wrote: “What a blessing to have known him and benefited from his advice and kindness, even as his illness gripped him.

Field was first elected as the Labour MP for Birkenhead in Merseyside in 1979. He was made a cross-bench peer in 2020, where he became Lord Field of Birkenhead, and two years later was made a member of the order of the companions of honour.

‘greatly missed’

He continued to serve on the boards of Cool Earth, Feeding Britain and the Frank Field Education Trust.

Field was welfare reform minister in Tony Blair’s first government in 1997 and went on to chair the work and pensions select committee.

He later resigned the Labour whip over antisemitism and “nastiness” in the party under Jeremy Corbyn’s leadership. He stood in the 2019 general election was writing to the first minister setting out her concerns about the Scottish government’s priorities and seeing if there were areas where her party and the SNP could work together ahead of any confidence vote.

Ms Regan told reporters that she has not made her mind up yet on which way to vote.

In the event of a tied vote, the presiding officer would vote to retain the status quo.

Speaking as they announced their decision, Scottish Greens co-leader Lorna Slater said the party entered the agreement on the basis that they would work together to deliver a “progressive policy programme”.

But she said Mr Yousaf’s decision to end it came with no reassurance that the SNP would continue with those objectives.

“It abruptly ends the pro-independence majority government which the public voted for, and which members of both parties supported,” she said.

Field was first elected as the Labour MP for Birkenhead in Merseyside in 1979 for his newly formed Birkenhead Social Justice party but lost the seat to Mick Whitley for Labour.

Field died on Tuesday in a London care home. He gave his support to the assisted dying bill in 2021, which would make it legal for terminally ill adults in England and Wales to seek support to end their lives.

In a statement read by Molly Meacher, who had tabled the bill, Field said: “I’ve just spent a period in a hospice and I’m not well enough to participate in today’s debate. If I had been, I would have spoken strongly in favour of the second reading [of the bill].

“I changed my mind on assisted dying when an MP friend was dying of cancer and wanted to die early, before the full horror effects set in, but was denied this opportunity.”

His family said in their statement: “Frank is survived by two brothers. He will be mourned by admirers across politics but above all he will be greatly missed by those lucky enough to have enjoyed his laughter and friendship.”

Attack:

Michael Cray, senior Crown prosecutor at CPS Cymru-Wales, said: “A youth who cannot be named for legal reasons has been charged with three counts of attempted murder and possession of a bladed article on a school premises.

“The youth has been remanded in custody to appear before Llanelli Magistrates’ Court tomorrow on Friday April 26.

“Criminal proceedings are active and the defendant has the right to a fair trial.

“It is extremely important that there should be no reporting, commentary or sharing of information online which could in any way prejudice these proceedings.”

After a bruising battle, PM finally gets his Rwanda flights bill passed into law

AFTER A LONG BATTLE, plans for the UK to send some asylum seekers to Rwanda have been passed by Parliament.

The government says any asylum seeker entering the UK "illegally" after 1 January 2022, from a safe country such as France, could be sent to Rwanda.

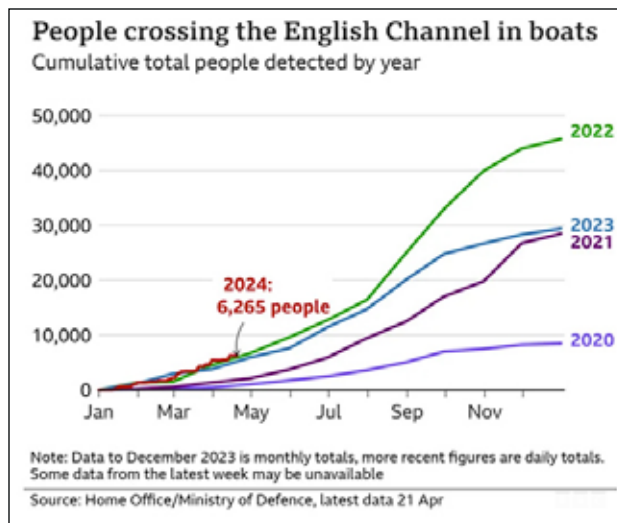

They would have their asylum claims processed there, rather in than the UK.

If successful, they could be granted refugee status and allowed to stay in the landlocked east-central African country.

If not, they could apply to settle in Rwanda on other grounds, or seek asylum in another "safe third country".

No asylum seeker would be able to apply to return to the UK.

Ministers say the plan will deter people from arriving in the UK on small boats across the English Channel.

There is no limit on the number of asylum seekers who could be sent to Rwanda.

The Rwanda bill was introduced to allow the scheme to go ahead after the Supreme Court initially ruled it was unlawful.

The first flight to Rwanda was scheduled for June 2022, but was cancelled after legal challenges.

Speaking on 22 April, Prime Minister Rishi Sunak said the first flight would now leave in 10-12 weeks. This is later than the government's previous goal of sending people in spring.

Mr Sunak did not confirm how many people would be on board, but said there would be "multiple flights a month through the summer and beyond".

TAKING A FLIER: The PM claims the first flights will leave in 10-12 weeks

The PM also said the government had "put an airfield on standby" and had booked commercial charter planes.

He said the number of detention spaces for people the government was preparing to remove had been increased to 2,200 and that "200 trained, dedicated caseworkers" were available to process cases quickly.

Mr Sunak said that 25 courtrooms and 150 judges were available to deal with any legal cases, and there were "500 highly trained individuals ready to escort illegal migrants all the way to Rwanda", with a further 300 to be trained. It is estimated that over 50,000 people are subject to the deportation.

After the Supreme Court ruled that the scheme was unlawful, the government introduced a bill to make clear in UK law that Rwanda is a safe country.

The legislation - which was finally approved on 22 April after intense political wrangling - orders the courts to ignore key sections of the Human Rights Act.

It also compels the courts to disregard other British laws or international rules - such as the international Refugee Convention - which would block deportations to Rwanda.

The UK government also signed a new migration treaty with Rwanda, which Home Secretary James Cleverly said guarantees that anyone sent there would not risk being returned to their home country.

But the Rwanda bill was fiercely criticised by opposition parties and by many charities representing asylum seekers. And even after it was passed, the illegal migration minister Michael Tomlinson said a "whole range of legal challenges" is now expected.

Four injured in London as spooked horses go on the lam

Four people have been taken to hospital after five runaway horses of the Household Cavalry threw off their riders and raced through London.

The horses, one of which was covered in blood, caused chaos as they roamed the city centre and collided with vehicles, including a double-decker bus and taxi.

They initially became spooked by loud construction during a routine military exercise in Belgravia, the Army said.

Officers said the horses had been recovered and returned to camp.

Two of the animals were finally recovered in Limehouse in east London, more than five miles from where the incident began. The Army said they were undergoing veterinary care.

An army spokesperson told the BBC that three soldiers were receiving treatment for non-life threatening injuries. The fourth person injured in the incident is believed to be a cyclist and member of the public.

The chaos began while members of the Household Cavalry - members of the military who carry out ceremonial duties around Buckingham Palace - were taking part in a rehearsal for a Major General's Inspection - which was due to take place on Thursday in Hyde Park, the Army told the BBC.

Every military unit taking part in the King's birthday parade, which takes place in June, must pass a Major General's Inspection in advance. An Army spokesman said the group included six soldiers and seven horses. Four soldiers were thrown from their saddles, and five horses ran loose through London.

Lt Col Matt Woodward, commanding officer of the Household Cavalry Mounted Regiment, said: "Building materials were dropped from height right next to them."

"The ensuing shock caused all horses to bolt and unseated some riders."

The four horses caused injuries to several people and a double decker bus after being spooked by construction activity in the Belgravia neighborhood

He expressed "heartfelt gratitude" to the emergency services and the public who helped in securing the horses.

One serviceman was thrown from his horse on Buckingham Palace Road, before one of the loose animals collided with a taxi waiting outside the Clermont Hotel, shattering the windows.

London Ambulance Service said four people were treated by paramedics in Buckingham Palace Road, Belgrave Square, and the junction between Chancery Lane and Fleet Street. All four were taken to hospital.

An Army spokesperson added:

"All of the horses have now been recovered and returned to camp. A number of personnel and horses have been injured and are receiving the appropriate medical attention."

Rule Britannia can stay - for now

Traditional finale to Last Night of The Proms 'too important' to audience to drop, says BBC boss

Rule, Britannia! will continue to be sung at the Last Night of the Proms because millions of TV viewers expect to hear it, the boss of the event said this week.

Sam Jackson said the rousing anthem will remain part of the traditional show because millions of licence fee payers tune in to hear it.

And Jackson rejected calls from star cellist Sheku Kanneh-Mason, who was born in Nottingham of Antiguan descent, to scrap the song because its colonial associations made people "uncomfortable".

Mr Jackson, who is in charge of BBC Radio 3 and the Proms, had previously said he would "pause and reflect" on the musician's plea, declaring "we have to do what is morally right".

Announcing this year's Proms programme, which includes performances from pop singers Sam Smith and Florence Welch, Mr Jackson confirmed: "We are including "Rule, Britannia!" in the Last Night. We are not making that change."

"Our view at the BBC is that it continues to be part of the Last Night."

Explaining the decision, he said: "We know that for a very large number of people, particularly the TV audience - 3.5m watched the Last Night's peak on BBC One last year - for a section of our audience and our licence fee payers, the traditions of the Last Night are very important."

Mr Jackson, 40, who was formerly the managing editor of Classic FM, condemned the "abhorrent" racial abuse that Kanneh-Mason faced on social media after his remarks.

"That would cause any right-thinking person to pause and reflect. We want the Proms to be a place where everyone feels welcome," he said.

The BBC faced a backlash in 2020 after announcing a plan to perform the Thomas Arne composition without any lyrics, a decision that was reversed days later when Tim Davie became the corporation's Director General.

Mr Jackson said the fact that Kanneh-Mason performed at last year's Last Night, and will appear during this Summer's season, despite his reservations over the song, "shows the degree to which he values the Proms and how much he wants his performances to be heard by as many people as possible".

British lad tops pecking order at Belgian Seagull Screeching contest

A nine-year-old British boy has won a European championship with his uncanny impression of a seagull.

Cooper Wallace, from Chesterfield in Derbyshire, travelled to the Belgian coastal town of De Panne to compete in the EC Gull Screeching competition.

He originally started doing seagull impressions after being nipped by one while he was eating a tuna sandwich.

He wanted to become "Seagull Boy", like when Peter Parker became Spider-Man after being bitten by a spider.

"I feel like they are a really nice animal, I like them because of their noise," said Cooper.

"Sometimes they can be a bit scary and I'm still a bit wary of eating at the beach, so that's why I eat in a small tent.

"The last meal I had at the beach was an ice cream."

"People would start to turn around and look for the seagull," she said.

The family heard about the competition from a random man who overheard Cooper doing impressions at a soft-play centre and suggested Cooper could compete.

He scored 92 points out of a possible 100, which meant he won the juvenile category and also had the highest points score in the competition.

The other categories were for adults and also for "colonies", meaning a group of people doing seagull impressions.

Cooper took his lucky mascot with him - a small model seagull which he calls Stephen and spells with a "ph", but his parents call Steven Seagull, like the actor Steven Seagal.

His parents and grandparents were there to support him, as was his sister Shelby, who had a big cone of chips made from foam.

Jan Seys, a marine biologist and one of the judges, said: "He managed to include

several call types in his performance and each of them resembled a real seagull call in a most impressive way. "In fact, for me, he was not only the best of the young participants, but of all those who took part in the championship."

Spice Girls reunite - if only for Posh's 50th

All five members of the Spice Girls have reunited, just perhaps not as you'd expect.

On Saturday night, Victoria Beckham, Melanie Brown, Emma Bunton, Geri Horner and Melanie Chisholm, better known as Posh, Scary, Baby, Ginger and Sporty Spice, came together to celebrate Victoria's 50th birthday in London.

The bandmates partied like it was 1997, performing their classic song, Stop.

David Beckham shared the moment on Instagram, and was seen singing along.

"I mean come on,"

Victoria's husband, and former England captain, 48, wrote in his caption.

Victoria responded in the comments, writing: "Best night ever! Happy Birthday to me! I love you all so much! #SpiceUpYourLife."

The hashtag relates to a song of the same name, released by the Spice Girls during their 1990s heyday. The party, which was reported to have taken place at Oswald's private members club in Mayfair, saw celebrity appearances from the likes of Tom Cruise, Salma Hayek, Rosie Huntington-Whiteley and Gordon Ramsay.

Ahead of the party,

Geri Halliwell, Melanie Chisholm, Victoria Beckham, Emma Bunton and Melanie Brown were back in the limelight in London on Saturday night

Victoria shared a series of photos on Instagram of her family, including her husband and the couple's four children - Brooklyn, Romeo, Cruz and Harper.

"Can't wait to celebrate with my family and friends! I love you all so much," the fashion designer wrote.

Beckham and his three sons were all dressed in tuxedos. Victoria opted for a light green ball gown, while Harper wore a cream floor-length dress.

Victoria has recently been pictured on crutches, although she wasn't using them in the pictures she shared on social media.

The bandmates did not appear to be using microphones during the birthday performance, but were seen singing along as they performed the Stop dance routine together.

Fans on social media were overjoyed to see the five Spice Girls back together for the first time in years, with many commenting on Beckham's post.

"David, you are the best social media manager out there, thank you for giving the people content," wrote one.

"The moment the entire planet has been waiting for," wrote another.

The Spice Girls came together in 1994, after they responded to an advert for candidates to form an all-girl group.

After the release of their chart-topping debut single Wannabe in 1996, "Spice mania" swept the planet, with their self-styled "Girl

Come and have a go if you think you're smart enough at Brits in LA Pub Quiz each Tuesday night at O'Briens in Santa Monica.

The trivia champions last time out were team You Can't Acquit who won the trophy and free drinks at the packed pub.

But everyone was a winner thanks to a string of fun consolation prizes and a special treat from sponsors Guinness who displayed players' faces in the foam of a pint.

The fun starts again on April 30 at 8 and Sandro Monetti is your host. All welcome.

Manufacturers say Blackpool rock should get protected status

Cheap Chinese imports leave resort's famed sweet treat between a rock and a hard place

Arbroath Smokies, Anglesey Sea Salt, Cornish Pasties.

All classic British products which enjoy a Protected Designation of Origin status to protect them from cheap imitators in the marketplace.

And if Blackpool rock manufacturers get their way, Blackpool Rock may soon be joining that elite club.

Because all is not well in the traditional Lancashire seaside town, where the "heritage and tradition" of the local sweet treat is under threat from an influx of "inferior" Chinese imports and a shortage of skilled workers, the resort's manufacturers have said. In a letter petitioning for the designation, 10 manufacturers said they were under "severe threat" from "cheap imitation imports".

They also said only nine factories remained in production and only 30 people in the UK had the skills to "letter" sticks of rock, "almost all of them in Blackpool".

They added that Blackpool rock should be given protected status, similar to that given to Stilton cheese, Cornish clotted cream and Melton Mowbray pork pies.

Sticks of Blackpool rock have been a traditional treat for visitors to the seaside resort for more than a century, since appearing in the late Victorian period.

One Blackpool company, Stanton & Novelty Confectioners Ltd, said it made thousands of sticks every day using about two tons of sugar a week.

In a letter to local MPs Scott Benton, Paul Maynard, Ben Wallace and Mark Menzies, the resort's manufacturers said the "rise of cheap Chinese imported imitations" was posing a "grave and immediate challenge to our industry".

"Preserving the heritage and tradition of British confectionery is not only essential for our economy but also maintaining our cultural identity and pride," they said.

CITY:

by the 5-0 thrashing of Chelsea at Emirates Stadium.

This did not have any impact on City, who have been through this tension before, as what was pitched as a tricky trip to the south coast turned into a formality.

It had all the hallmarks of a City performance close to the Premier League finishing line - calm and ruthless with flashes of brilliance from those who can change any game for manager Pep Guardiola.

De Bruyne is renowned for just about anything apart from his heading ability but he scored an athletic effort to open the scoring. It was then Foden's turn to add further flourishes.

Such was their comfort that Guardiola was even able to give De Bruyne and Foden a breather by substituting them before the end with the game won, conserving energy for the weekend visit to struggling Nottingham Forest.

Brighton were chasing European football in thrilling style at this stage last season under De Zerbi - a mission they accomplished successfully.

Here, depleted by injuries, they were jaded and lacking inspiration as their campaign continues to look like it will end in anti-climax.

Brighton's supporters felt they did not get the rub of the green with decisions, especially with the free-kick award that led to City's second goal, the mood inside the Amex worsening when second-half penalty appeals were turned down.

In reality, however, they looked a shadow of the side that made life so difficult for the top teams last season, being outclassed and overwhelmed by their visitors.

Arne hoping to Slot in at Anfield

Arne Slot: 'confident' Liverpool and Feyenoord will reach an agreement

Arne Slot has said he hopes to take over from Jurgen Klopp as Liverpool manager at the end of the season.

Liverpool opened talks with Feyenoord on Wednesday about Slot's potential appointment.

The Dutchman confirmed his interest in the job to ESPN before Feyenoord's 3-1 league victory on Thursday against Go Ahead Eagles.

"It seems clear to me that I would like to work there," Slot said.

"All I can say about it is that the clubs are in negotiations. I'm in the waiting room."

He added that he was "confident" Liverpool and Feyenoord would be able to reach an agreement.

Slot, 45, led Feyenoord to the 2022-23 Eredivisie title and this season's Dutch Cup, and he has previously been linked with Tottenham Hotspur and Leeds United.

Liverpool will have to negotiate a fee with Feyenoord if Slot is appointed, as he does not have a release clause for this summer.

There is one in his contract, but it cannot be activated until next year.

On Wednesday, Reds captain Virgil van Dijk said that Slot's playing philosophy would suit the club, describing him as "one of the better Dutch coaches at the moment".

Arsenal:

league game at Emirates Stadium, when it looked like the tension of life at the top got to them.

The Gunners needed a fast start, which Trossard's goal gave them, and after that they slowly but surely rediscovered the fluency and threat that looked like it had deserted them.

Arteta's side found hapless Chelsea compliant opponents but the swagger they displayed as they piled on the goals in the second half will have done wonders for self-confidence before Sunday's crunch north London derby at Tottenham Hotspur.

At the heart of it all was captain Odegaard, composed and oozing class throughout, his delivery for Havertz's second goal an elite moment as it allowed the German to run on and fire high past Petrovic.

Every game is seen through the prism of a test of Arsenal's character after the manner of their late collapse last season, along with recent setbacks, but the win at Wolves and thrashing handed out to Chelsea here showed the resilience that has grown in this season.

They could have actually made this a more convincing scoreline such as their superiority, and the fact that Havertz was on the scoresheet twice against his former club, after a first-half performance that can be politely described as lacklustre, only added to the sweetness of victory.

The game at Spurs on Sunday will have huge ramifications for both teams and the Premier League title race but Arsenal's spirits will be soaring after this result and performance.

As for Chelsea, they could easily have suffered greater humiliation had Arsenal taken all their chances.

They actually had moments in the first half but the manner in which they effectively gave up once White made it

2-0 made for disturbing viewing for anyone of a Chelsea persuasion.

They were without talisman and leading goalscorer Cole Palmer, missing because of illness, but those on pitch made a mockery of Pochettino's pre-match claim that it was time to show they were not a one-man team.

It was another miserable night for Jackson, culpable in the Wembley loss to Manchester City, as he looked stripped of confidence and missed good opportunities that came his way.

Pochettino could only look on with disgust as his side were torn apart by Arsenal.

The Blues manager told reporters his team had produced "extremes" of performances during his first season in charge at Stamford Bridge.

Their past two Premier League games have been a perfect demonstration, with a 6-0 home win over Everton followed by a 5-0 loss at Arsenal.

In between, Chelsea were narrowly beaten by Manchester City in their FA Cup semi-final at Wembley.

Foden gets brace as City keep it tight at the top

Manchester City moved smoothly to within one point of Premier League leaders Arsenal with a game in hand after a routine 4-0 victory over Brighton at the Amex Stadium on Thursday.

What threatened to be a dangerous fixture was effectively over by the interval as City romped into a three-goal lead, moving ahead of Liverpool into second place and closing ominously on Arsenal.

Kevin de Bruyne's first header in his 68 Premier League goals, a magnificent flying effort into the top corner, set City on their way before Phil Foden controversially doubled the advantage nine minutes later.

Referee Jarrod Gillett awarded City a free-kick despite Foden only appearing to slip, Brighton seeing insult added to injury as his resulting set-piece strike took a deflection off Pascal Gross to wrong-foot keeper Jason Steele.

Any hope of a

Brighton comeback was extinguished after 34 minutes by a smooth Foden finish into the bottom corner, after the Seagulls had been caught in possession trying to play out from the back.

It was then simply a case of damage limitation for Roberto de Zerbi's side but City extended their lead just after the hour when the ball ran away from Steele as he went into a challenge with Kyle Walker and Julian Alvarez was on hand to pounce.

Manchester City are at it again, reaching peak form just when it matters to turn up the pressure on pace-setters Arsenal as the title race reaches the final few fences.

Gunners humble the Blues

Arsenal ratcheted up the pressure on their tital rivals with a crushing 5-0 victory over Chelsea Wednesday night at Emirates Stadium.

The Gunners backed up their weekend win at Wolverhampton Wanderers with an emphatic performance helped by a dreadful display from a Chelsea side who looked like they wanted the season to end now after their FA Cup semi-final defeat by Manchester City.

Arsenal suffered last week with a home Premier League defeat by Aston Villa and a Champions League quarter-final exit to Bayern Munich but the manner of this win demonstrated the title momentum is now back with Mikel Arteta's team.

Leandro Trossard settled any early nerves when he beat Chelsea keeper Djordje Petrovic at his near post and while the visitors occasionally threatened in the first half, Nicolas Jackson missing a clear headed chance, Arsenal simply ran riot after the break.

The second goal Arsenal craved came as Ben White turned in after Chelsea failed to clear a corner before former Stamford Bridge forward Kai Havertz struck twice in eight minutes, the second a quite sumptuous finish from Martin Odegaard's magnificent pass.

As Chelsea subsided in embarrassing fashion, White looped his second over Petrovic. It pushed their goal difference up to +56 - 13 better than Liverpool's and eight ahead of Manchester City - on what was pretty much the perfect night for Arsenal.

Arsenal supporters may have viewed this meeting with capital rivals Chelsea with a degree of trepidation after they slipped badly and were outplayed by Aston Villa in their last
