KEEP THE FAITH!

- Starmer urges unity as he vows to build 'a new Britain'
- PM tells Labour 'he will not con people with false hope'

Britain can become a country of pride, wealth and stability if the public accepts a series of difficult "trade-offs", rejects nimbyism and sees through the Conservatives' populist "lies", Keir Starmer has said.

In his first Labour conference speech as prime minister, he urged the public to keep faith amid tough and sometimes unpopular choices made by the government, telling them he understood their impatience for real change.

Those difficult decisions include building new prisons so that justice could be served, over-ground pylons to provide cheaper electricity, and accepting that a serious system to tackle irregular migration would also include accepting some asylum seekers.

Starmer attempted to draw a line under a week of bruising rows over donations, telling delegates he would not be distracted by noisy criticism of his government which he regarded as "mere glitter on a shirt cuff", a reference to a protest during last year's speech.

The prime minister left the gathering in Liverpool early to travel to New York on Tuesday for the UN general assembly, with senior aides pressing for meetings with the US presidential candidates Kamala Harris and Donald Trump.

But aides said that he had now started to address concerns, some of them internal, that he had been too gloomy since taking office while trying to "level with" the public about the economic inheritance. They believe that he is now beginning to explain why the tough choices in front of him – including tax rises and public spending cuts, which are expected in next month's budget – will be worth it.

"People ask us now, as we seek patience in pursuit of national renewal: 'What will we get to show for it?' I understand that. After all, what they are used to is a lie. An act, a charade, a performance," he told party delegates.

"You can call it populism – many people do. But I prefer to call it the politics of easy answers. Because at its core that's what it is. A deliberate refusal to countenance tough decisions because the political pain is just too much to bear."

"The time is long overdue for politicians to level with you about the trade-offs this country faces. Because if the last few years have shown us anything, it's that if you bury your head because things are difficult, your country goes backwards."

'stronger than bricks'

In a speech that used the word "Britain" 21 times, Starmer condemned the summer's rioting, drawing loud applause when he said the UK unequivocally rejected those involved in violent thugery and "vile" racism.

"To those who say the only way to love your country is to hate your neighbour, because they look different, I say not only do we reject you, we know that you will never win," he said.

"Because the British values we stand for, not just the rule of law, but a love for this country and our neighbours, the respect for difference under the same flag, that is stronger than bricks and you know that."

In a policy-light speech, Starmer announced that veterans, young care leavers and victims of domestic abuse would be given a "guaranteed roof over their head".

All three groups will be exempt from local residency tests, which most councils currently have in place to determine who can qualify for social housing.

In a message particularly significant in Liverpool, he confirmed that the government would bring forward a Hillsborough law by the time of the next anniversary of the 1989 football stadium disaster in April.

And he confirmed that GB Energy, the new publicly owned energy company, would be based in Aberdeen, drawing months of speculation to an end.

Starmer's 54-minute address was interrupted by a Gaza protester.

The prime minister angered some on the left of his party when he responded with a prepared line: "This guy has obviously got a pass from the 2019 conference," a reference to Labour's catastrophic election defeat under Jeremy Corbyn.

However, he also made an unfortunate slip-up, calling for the return of "sausages" from Gaza, rather than the Israeli hostages taken during Hamas's attack on 7 October last year. He quickly corrected his mistake.

Starmer said that he understood public cynicism in politics and that he knew how hard it was for the public to hear politicians asking for more. "But deep down, I think you also know that our country does need a long-term plan and that we can't turn it back," he added.

News from Britain

Chancellor strikes optimistic tone to party faithful

PARTY CONFERENCE: Reeves promises a Budget for growth and investment and vows to plug 'Tory black hole'

Rachel Reeves has promised Britain's "best days lie ahead" as she sought to strike a more optimistic tone in her first speech to the Labour Party conference as chancellor.

Reeves has been accused of talking the economy down by warning of "tough choices" to deal with what she says is a worse-than-expected inheritance from the Conservatives.

In her speech, she said: "My ambition for Britain knows no limits because I can see the prize on offer if we make the right choices now."

But she faces a backlash from the trade unions and many Labour members over her decision to strip winter fuel payments from 10 million pensioners, with a conference debate expected later this week.

As Reeves stood up to deliver her 25 minute speech, news broke that nurses in England have said the government's award of a 5.5% pay rise is not enough, in an online poll.

Then, a few minutes into the speech, the chancellor was interrupted by a heckler protesting about continued arms sales to Israel while the war with Hamas in Gaza continues.

A campaign group called The Climate Resistance has claimed responsibility for the protest.

As the protester was dragged out of the hall, the chancellor won a standing ovation for saying that "this is a changed Labour Party and not a party of protest".

She also received a rapturous response when she promised a "war on Tory waste", with the appointment of a Covid corruption commissioner to help recoup £674m of disputed contracts the Conservatives had agreed to waive.

To loud applause, she said: "That money belongs in our police, it belongs in our health service and belongs in our schools. Conference, we want that money back."

She announced that Labour's promise to set up free breakfast clubs would be piloted in 750 primary schools in England from April, at a cost of £7m.

This will be followed by a national rollout, she told the conference, describing it as "an investment in our young people, an investment in reducing child poverty and investment in our economy".

Defending her decision to cut winter fuel payments for many pensioners, she said: "It was made clear to me that failure to act swiftly could undermine the UK's fiscal position with implications for public debt, mortgages and prices."

"And so, I took action to make the in-year savings necessary."

Looking ahead to her first Budget on 30 October, Reeves said there would be no increases in income tax, national insurance or VAT - and "no return to austerity".

She said it would be a Budget for economic growth and investment - but gave few clues about tax and spending decision it might contain.

Instead, she spoke of the "prize" on offer from economic stability and a new industrial strategy to spread wealth across Britain.

"Yes, we must deal with the Tory legacy and that means tough decisions, but I won't let that dim our ambition for Britain," she told delegates.

RACHEL REEVES: "My ambition for Britain knows no limits"

"So, it will be a budget with real ambition, a budget to fix the foundations, a budget to deliver the change that we promised, a Budget to rebuild Britain."

Gove named new editor of Spectator

Former government minister Michael Gove (above) is to be the new editor of The Spectator, after the magazine was bought by hedge fund tycoon and GB News-backer Sir Paul Marshall.

He will take on the role at the start of October, according to Freddie Sayers, the magazine's publisher.

In a post on X, formerly Twitter, Mr Sayers, who is also the chief executive of new owner OQS, added Mr Gove was "perfectly suited to the role".

Mr Gove, who stepped down from Parliament at the general election, was a journalist before he became a Conservative MP.

He will start the job after final approval from Acoba, the advisory committee on business appointments which advises former ministers when they take jobs after leaving the government.

Mr Gove replaces Fraser Nelson, who is stepping down "after 15 incredibly successful years", Mr Sayers said.

Mr Nelson will continue to write for The Spectator and will become associate editor.

In an article published on Wednesday, Mr Nelson called Mr Gove "the clear successor" to replace him.

"He's a first-class journalist who took a detour into politics and not (as so often happens) the other way around," he wrote.

"There's never a good time to leave a job like mine but, after 15 years and a new owner with big ambitions, there is an obvious time."

Mr Nelson has overseen a highly successful period for the magazine, including the growth of its digital product.

His decision to step down follows Andrew Neil's exit as the magazine's chairman earlier this month.

Mr Gove, first elected MP for Surrey Heath in 2005, served in the governments of David Cameron, Theresa May, Boris Johnson and Rishi Sunak.

He takes on his new role as editor of the right-leaning magazine as the Conservative party prepares to elect its next leader.

Al Fayed: a scandal deepens, Met urges victims to come forward

British police called on Thursday for anyone with allegations against former Harrods owner Mohamed Al Fayed to come forward and said it would look to prosecute others after multiple women accused the late billionaire of sexual abuse and rape.

A BBC documentary aired last week said Al Fayed had sexually abused female staff at his London department store Harrods and had threatened them if they tried to complain. It said the company had failed to intervene and helped to cover up abuse allegations during his ownership from 1985 to 2010.

Although Al Fayed himself died last year, aged 94, London's Metropolitan Police said it would explore whether any other individuals could be pursued for criminal offences.

"It is vital that any victims have a voice and are able to report any allegations if they have not done so before, and know that they will be taken seriously," said Stephen Clayman, head of specialist crime at the Metropolitan Police.

"We have specialist teams to ensure all those victims who make contact with us are supported in the best way possible."

One woman, known only as 'Kate', told the BBC that she was 16 when she was raped by Mohamed Al Fayed said the assault "changed the course of my life and career entirely".

Kate was working at Harrods - her first job - and she was also subjected to inappropriate and "humiliating" questioning by the billionaire and an intrusive medical check.

"I want people to fully understand just how much of a monster he truly was," Kate said, adding that she wanted to speak out after seeing other women come forward.

"It has affected so many areas of my life, but having to live with the deep shame of what happened to me so young, being paranoid at night walking by myself, not trusting men in any form of even slightly vulnerable situation, are to name but a few," she said.

Kate said "inappropriate questions" started soon after she began working for Al Fayed.

"He asked me if I had a boyfriend and if I had been sexually active," she said.

"I was 16-years-old and a virgin, which he discovered."

She said Al Fayed then asked to see her and began discussing the intimate details of her medical and “questioned my purity”.

She found the conversation "confusing, intrusive and humiliating", she said.

Al Fayed knew that she had a long distance to travel to work and offered that she could stay at his Park Lane apartment, which she said they too were subject to “intrusive” medical tests, including sexual health tests, while working at Harrods, conducted by Dr Jo Coxon.

The Justice For Harrods survivors group has filed a complaint to the General Medical Council about her conduct.

She was one of two doctors repeatedly named by women for carrying out intrusive medical examinations and sexual health screening while they were working at Harrods.

Another doctor also reported to have carried out the medical tests - Wendy Snell - has since died.

The group has confirmed to the BBC that a complaint has been put in to the medical regulator about Dr Coxon, but the details of the complaint have not been shared.

Lawyers representing women alleging rape and sexual assault against Al Fayed said they had received more than 150 new enquiries from women.

Harrods, which was sold by Al Fayed to the investment vehicle of the Qatar royal family in 2010, has said in response to the allegations that it was “utterly appalled”.

Several media organisations had exposed allegations of sexual abuse against Al Fayed in the past, including Vanity Fair in 1995, Britain’s ITV in 1997 and Channel 4 in 2017. Many of the women only felt able to speak publicly after his death.

In 2009, prosecutors decided not to charge Al Fayed over a claim that he had sexually assaulted a 15-year-old girl in his store, saying there was no realistic prospect of conviction.

He always denied the accusations.

Ex-sergeant jailed over horse racing betting fraud

■ Trusted cop bilked £44m out of investors in elaborate Ponzi scheme

A former police officer who funded his lavish lifestyle by duping thousands of people involved with a horse racing betting syndicate has been jailed.

Michael Stanley admitted misusing money from members of the Layezzy Racing Syndicate for several years before his arrest in 2019.

Terry Wildey, a retired hairdresser from Kent, said he and his family had put £200,000 into the scheme after he encouraged his own relatives to invest.

“He’s a rat isn’t he,” he told reporters, after Stanley was sentenced to six years’ imprisonment at Maidstone Crown Court.

“He consciously set that up with the sole intention of taking people’s money.”

About £44m was paid into the scheme and an estimated £34m was withdrawn by members, leaving a £10m shortfall which remains unaccounted for.

One victim lost nearly £500,000, the court heard.

The former Kent Police sergeant, 68, pleaded guilty to running the “Ponzi scheme” in March.

The court was told the syndicate started out with family and friends and grew to more than 6,000 members, and had a waiting list of 3,000 people at the time it collapsed.

It also heard that Stanley, from Walderslade, used £4m on personal spending, including to buy himself a £400,000 property in Spain, Land Rover vehicles amounting to more than £600,000

Michael Stanley used the money to fund a lavish lifestyle and 23 race horses.

He also bought £1.6m in cryptocurrency and £622,000 worth of silver bullion.

The judge told Stanley: “Your conduct was not reckless, but deliberate, sustained and repeated. When people gambled with you, they did not know the true odds. They were told lies.”

Stanley, who gained the trust of members thanks to his background as a police officer, was also banned from being a director of a company for 15 years.

He will serve half of his sentence in custody, and the rest on licence, while a five-year Serious Crime Prevention Order will start on the day he is released from prison.

SAS war crimes claims ‘broadly accurate’

■ Elite unit targeted fighting age males in Afghanistan, inquiry hears

Ministry of Defence officials concluded privately in a 2019 letter that allegations to be aired in a BBC Panorama on alleged SAS war crimes were “broadly accurate”.

Despite the internal warning, the MoD’s response sought to deny the claims, pointing out that Royal Military Police investigations into the alleged war crimes had resulted in no prosecutions.

The letter, from a senior MoD official to then-defence secretary Sir Ben Wallace, was one of several internal documents cited on Monday at an Independent Inquiry relating to Afghanistan.

The inquiry is examining whether there is credible evidence that the SAS unlawfully killed people on night raids.

The letter informed Sir Ben that “the level of detail” in Panorama’s request for comment “suggests they have spoken to well-placed sources”.

It went on to warn that there was “a risk that these sources will have provided Panorama with documents that will enable them to substantiate these allegations”.

The BBC reported on ‘credible’ allegations that the SAS had repeatedly killed unarmed detainees and civilians on night raids in Afghanistan, and that RMP investigations into the alleged killings had been improperly closed down.

The BBC subsequently reported in 2022 that one SAS unit had unlawfully killed 54 people in one six-month tour.

Sir Ben told the inquiry on Monday that he had always wanted to get to the bottom of the allegations against the SAS, and that when made aware of concerns about special forces operations in Afghanistan he had repeatedly sought more information about those concerns.

The internal MoD documents disclosed in court showed that, despite the department’s conclusion that there were “broadly accurate” allegations in the letter from the BBC, officials “should continue to resist allegations of widespread systemic abuse and criminal behaviour” and “should rebut Panorama’s allegations about investigations and decisions being improperly influenced”.

Another document revealed that before signing off the reply to the BBC’s request for comment, Sir Ben had sought out and read a classified memo written by a very senior member of UK Special Forces that outlined serious concerns over alleged SAS murders in Afghanistan.

The memo, written to the head of Special Forces in April 2011, said that there appeared to be “an unofficial policy” among SAS squadrons to kill any fighting-age Afghan male during a raid “regardless of the immediate threat they pose to our troops”.

It added: “In some instances this has involved the deliberate killing of individuals after they have been restrained by [the SAS] and the subsequent fabrication of evidence to suggest a lawful killing in self defence.”

It emerged last year that the memo was locked away in a safe, despite a law which requires every commanding officer in the armed forces to report any evidence of war crimes to the Royal Military Police.

Asked about the memo in court on Monday, Sir Ben said the memo was a “very important document and the allegations that followed from it were very important”.

He added that he was “concerned” about the contents of the memo, “but I also refer you to the date – it was a decade before my time”.

Sir Ben said he would have expected the commanding officer of the special forces unit responsible, and the then-Director Special Forces, General Jonathan Page, to refer the allegations to the RMP.

“There was no excuse for the commanding officer or the Director Special Forces not to have referred that to police,” he said. “It is inexcusable.”

Pressed by the inquiry team about whether he had sought out the source of the allegations in the memo – a whistleblower from within special forces – Sir Ben acknowledged that he had not.

The inquiry continues.

China mourns “Old Dry Ken”

■ Keith Brown’s boring sandwiches went viral on social media

A British man known as ‘Old Dry Keith’ who went viral for making ‘white people’s food’ has died after being diagnosed with bone cancer.

Keith Brown, (pictured, right) who was a citizen of New Zealand, attracted millions of viewers on the Chinese social media platform Douyin each day as he made lunches, including ham sandwiches and eggs on toast.

His account, which was run by his wife ‘Jane’ Zhang Jian, reached over one million followers with a trend even being sparked in China of people trying to create their own ‘dry lunch’.

Some Chinese supermarkets also created a ‘dry shopping area’ with ingredients Keith regularly used, including bread.

Keith and Jane met in Malaysia in 2007 before she began posting videos of him as she adapted to life in the UK.

They quickly went viral in China, with one clip showing Keith unable to find an avocado to go with his smoked salmon.

Jane told the BBC: ‘I was quite surprised by how popular Keith became in China.

‘It’s not that I didn’t expect people to like him, but I wasn’t prepared for how it would turn out.’

Zhou Zhiruo, a writer from China, said: ‘We watch him struggling to saw apart two slices of dry bread, as hard as weapons-grade steel, slicing off a few thin streaks of yellow from a block of hardened butter that has not yet completely thawed, and then placing two slices of pre-smoked salmon on top.

‘This vision is enough to make ordinary people think of the lunch they just hurriedly swallowed, and feel empathy and sadness.

‘He is just like all those of us who have to pay our credit card bill but our salary hasn’t arrived, or have to go to a meeting but find that their mobile phone battery is at 10 per cent. He bravely faces all of life’s blows.’

territory” while in the water, but he was “not very fond of what [one] did to me”.

The attack by the submerged animal happened near the Cherries’ camp during a leg of the trip that was an organized canoe safari.

“When the hippo first hit the canoe, there was a massive crash, much like a car crash really,” said Mr Cherry, an experienced canoeist.

The craft “reared up in the air”, tossing the pair into the water.

“I remember surfacing, realizing my shoulder was quite badly injured and I realized I’d dislocated it from the outset and the consequences were that I couldn’t actually swim.

He was then dragged to the bottom of the river.

Mr Cherry explained:

“I do remember thinking ‘oh no, what a way to go... I’m not ready to die’ and I thought this was it, because nobody survives hippo attacks.”

He said he then remembered being sat in shallow water on the bank, but was grabbed again.

“We know subsequently from fellow travellers I was grabbed again and thrown through the air like a rag doll but towards the bank which was the godsend,” Mr Cherry told reporters.

Ten weeks on the Camino

The famed 500-mile walk through Northern Spain is all the rage right now. Nick Stark puts on his hiking boots and joins in the....fun

The Camino de Santiago is having a moment.

The ancient pilgrimage across Northern Spain to the cathedral city of Santiago de Compostela near the Galician coast dates back more than a thousand years, to those uncertain days when anxious believers braved bad weather, bandits and wolves to show their devotion to St James the Apostle, whose bones are reputedly buried there. These days the worst that is likely to befall what the Spanish call 'peregrinos' are sore feet, a bad internet connection and running out of hot water at the communal hostels – or albergues – that are all part of the modern day pilgrim experience.

But let's back up a little. The route from the south west tip of France to the end of the known world – Finisterre – had been known from Roman and pagan times. It's position directly under the Milky Way prompted early stargazers to believe the route – or The Way, as Camino most directly translates to English – had special powers and was a meeting point of ancient 'ley lines' connecting cosmic energy fields. The Romans built a road along what is now the Camino, but with the fall of empire the place became little more than a backwater until the ninth century, when a humble farmer allegedly found some bones in a field directly under a gathering of stars. A local cleric 'identified' the bones as belonging to St James, the famous fisher-of-men apostle, and the place was named 'Campos-Stella' (field of stars). Pilgrims soon started to arrive. And they've been coming ever since.

By medieval times the Camino was considered one of Christendom's Big Three pilgrimages, along with Jerusalem and Rome. Hostels, albergues and other refuges sprang up to house and feed them overnight. Local churches welcomed them, too. And less savory types sought to prey on them, prompting the Knights Templar, no less, to build a string of hilltop safehouses along the route to provide safe haven.

rebirth

But in later centuries the importance of the Church began to ebb, and by renaissance times the Camino had largely fallen into disuse, becoming little traveled outside of orthodox Catholic circles right up into the 1970s.

But by the turn of this century, things had started to change.

Well-known authors including Paulo Coelho and Shirley McLaine wrote best-sellers about the Camino. Ageing Westerners – often those approaching retirement age and looking for meaning in their lives began to discover the camino. Guide books started to appear. Tour companies started to offer guided trips, long and short, for various stages of the Camino. And then, in 2014 came the release of the movie The Way, in which Martin Sheen stars as a Californian dentist who embarks on the Camino as a tribute to his deceased son. Suddenly everyone was interested in taking that hike.

CAMINO:

Way started after seeing that movie. My interest was piqued, but not sufficiently to commit. Research revealed that there are actually multiple caminos, starting in Portugal, France, Italy and elsewhere in Spain, for example. There is even a Camino Ingles, starting in England. But the 'classic Camino' starts on the French side of the Pyrenees and continues for about 500 miles to the city of Santiago. And for the really devoted, there's another few days journey all the way to the Atlantic coast at Finisterre.

Calling to me

Upon delving a little deeper into the subject, I found that people I knew socially had done the Camino. Or family members of friends. One acquaintance of mine, I discovered, had actually written an e-book about it. I am one of the least religious people you will ever meet, but after these repeated signs of a connection to the Camino, I began to feel it was calling to me. And that feeling, I later learned, is very common among Camino first-timers. So I read some books, listened to some podcasts, joined some internet forums, until myself and my partner were ready to commit. We joined the Camino on September 15th and started walking. And we're still going. A little footsore it's true, but dutifully clocking 12-18 miles each day, hoping to reach Santiago towards the end of October.

Hopefully this will pique your interest, too, so come along for the ride.

Dream start for Arsenal teen

Teenager Ethan Nwaneri scored his first Arsenal goals as they cruised to victory over League One Bolton on Wednesday to reach the Carabao Cup fourth round.

The 17-year-old, making his first senior start for the club, slotted into an empty net from Raheem Sterling's cross, before taking advantage of some sloppy Bolton play to pick up the ball from Declan Rice and roll under visiting goalkeeper Luke Southwood.

Nwaneri's two goals came after he had already played a part in Arsenal's 16th-minute opener with a fizzed cross which Scott Arfield failed to clear and Rice dispatched a calm finish into the bottom corner.

"You can tell he is playing with a confidence and belief and an understanding of what he needs to do on the pitch," said

Arsenal boss Mikel Arteta, whose side will face Championship Preston at Deepdale in the next round.

"In his journey with the first team he is always ahead of what everybody expected and I expected too. He deserves that and he is part of us so he will have the minutes."

Sterling tapped home the fourth from a couple of yards in the 64th minute after Southwood spilled Bukayo Saka's effort. It was the forward's first goal in Arsenal colours, on his first start, since joining from London rivals Chelsea on transfer deadline day.

Kai Havertz wrapped up a convincing win at Emirates Stadium after guiding home a rebound when Sterling's shot was saved.

Aaron Collins had pulled one back for Bolton in the 53rd minute after a brilliant counter-attack. It was ultimately a consolation, but one that denied teenage Arsenal goalkeeper Jack Porter a clean sheet on his record-setting senior debut.

At 16 years and 72 days old, he became the youngest player to start a first-team game for the Gunners, breaking a mark set by Cesc Fabregas in October 2003 in the League Cup against Rotherham.

Porter is the club's fourth choice, but got the call after number one stopper David Raya was ruled out with a thigh injury, summer signing Neto was cup-tied, having already featured in the competition for parent club Bournemouth, and Tommy Setford was also out injured.

"We told him yesterday and he was over the moon," added Arteta on Porter.

"He is always ahead of what everybody expected," said Arsenal manager Mikel Arteta of 17 year old Ethan Nwaneri

"It is a big step, a big occasion, but he reacted really well. He was really composed in training and his team-mates helped him too. What an experience and what a way to break a record."

The Carabao Cup has long been seen as an opportunity to bleed in youngsters with Fabregas and Jack Wilshere among those to begin their Arsenal careers in the competition.

After a gruelling Premier League game against Manchester City on Sunday, boss Arteta opted to rest several first-team starters and chose a youthful line-up with Porter, full-back Josh Nichols, 18, Mylles Lewis-Skelley, 18, and Nwaneri making their full senior debuts. Two other teenagers Maldini Kacurri and Ismeal Kabia also made their first foray into first-team football off the bench.

But bolstered by the experience of Rice and Jorginho in midfield and the quality of Saka and Sterling on the wings, Arsenal's youngsters had the freedom to showcase their talent in this comfortable victory.

TEN MEN GOOD FOR SPURS

Tottenham began their Europa League campaign with an impressive 3-0 victory over Qarabag despite going down to 10 men from the seventh minute.

After a 35-minute delay to kick-off at Tottenham Hotspur Stadium on Thursday night because of travel disruptions, the home side were dealt an early blow when defender Radu Dragusin was shown a straight red card for bringing down Juninho in a one-on-one as the Brazilian raced through on goal.

Despite that, Brennan Johnson had the ball in the back of the net five minutes later when Qarabag were caught playing out from the back and Dominic Solanke placed it into the path of the 23-year-old to slot into the bottom corner.

It was Johnson's third goal in as many games.

Pape Sarr doubled Spurs' lead in the 52nd minute, controlling a loose ball at the far post before smashing home.

Qarabag were awarded a penalty three minutes later when Yves Bissouma brought Elvin Cafarquliyev down, but Toral Bayramov's spot-kick was poor and pinged off the crossbar.

The Azerbaijan Premier League champions created an abundance of chances, with Guglielmo Vicario making some fine saves, but ultimately Qarabag lacked the cutting edge that Ange Postecoglou's side showed at the other end.

Solanke wrapped up victory in the 68th minute after goalkeeper Mateusz Kochalski pushed Son Heung-min's strike from distance into the striker's path and he produced a confident finish.

Postecoglou said before the match the expanding football schedule is reaching a "dangerous level" and therefore used it as an opportunity to shuffle his pack, making six changes from the side that beat Brentford in the Premier League on Saturday.

He handed 18-year-olds Lucas Bergvall and Archie Gray their second Spurs starts but, following Dragusin's

Another bad night for Ten Hag

The pressure's on for Erik ten Hag

Christian Eriksen was hero and villain for Manchester United as Erik ten Hag's men stumbled at the start of their Europa League campaign, being held to a draw by their Dutch manager's boyhood club Twente.

Eriksen gave United a first-half lead with a superb strike from inside the penalty area.

However, against a dogged Twente outfit, Eriksen was punished when he allowed himself to be caught in possession by Sam Lammers just outside the United box.

The former Rangers player took maximum advantage as he drove a blistering effort past Andre Onana.

Ten Hag's side had opportunities to snatch victory in the final stages and Twente goalkeeper Lars Unnerstall denied Joshua Zirkzee, whose left-footed effort was heading into the net.
