ESTHER, THAT WAS A LIFE

- Consumer champion, TV presenter and Childline founder Rantzen dies aged 86
- Rantzen given lung cancer diagnosis in 2023 and was a vocal assisted-dying campaigner

Esther Rantzen, the Bafta-winning TV presenter and founder of Childline, has died aged 86.

In a statement, her family paid tribute to “the most wonderful mother” and “cherished grandmother”, whose “legacy of compassion and understanding will live on in her charities Childline and the Silverline, and through those of us who were lucky enough to love and be loved by her”.

“We are grateful she is finally at rest with her beloved husband, Desmond Wilcox, but we will miss her immeasurably. She was our sunshine. We will always remember her endless capacity for joy, her ability to comfort every heartache, her beautiful way with words and her expert guidance in all things,” said her three children.

Rantzen announced a diagnosis of stage four lung cancer in 2023, and became a vocal campaigner to change the law around assisted dying.

In September 2026,

she announced she had to abandon plans to end her life in Swiss clinic Dignitas, due to being too physically frail.

The prime minister, Andy Burnham, said: “Very sad to hear that Dame Esther Rantzen has died. Through her decades of campaigning, including founding Childline and The Silver Line, she changed countless lives and gave a voice to people who often went unheard.

‘fighter to the end’

“And I will always admire the characteristic courage and openness with which she spoke about her illness, making us all think about the difficult questions we face at the end of life. My thoughts are with her family and all who loved her.”

Kim Leadbeater, the Labour MP who introduced a bill to legalise assisted dying, said: “Esther was a strong, warm and compassionate woman and a fighter to the end.

Rantzen was born in Berkhamsted, Hertfordshire, in 1940 and began her career in 1963 as a BBC radio studio manager. Having moved into television as a researcher, she became a presenter in 1968, as part of the consumer affairs show Braden’s Week, before being appointed as the main host of its replacement programme, That’s Life!, in 1973.

Part magazine, part consumer show, with hard-hitting investigations and jokes, That’s Life! drew more than 20 million viewers at its peak – and ran for 21 years with Rantzen as anchor. After she successfully pitched an episode about child abuse to the then BBC controller Michael Grade, a set of phone lines was opened for 48 hours, which enabled children to call in and speak to social workers. The volume of responses led her to turn the service into a permanent fixture, ‘truly iconic’

In 2010, she launched the Silver Line – a free confidential helpline for older people, which led to her being made a dame for services to children and older people.

On Instagram, the television presenter Anna Williamson described Rantzen as “somebody truly iconic, who really cared, and who has left behind one hell of a legacy”.

Fellow presenter Lorraine Kelly also paid tribute to Rantzen on social media for being a “pioneer and a force of nature – [who] helped so many people – funny, forthright and fabulous”.

One of Rantzen’s

former co-hosts of That’s Life!, Howard Leader, said: “Over the time that I was with her, through her fantastic generosity, she taught me how to be a journalist.

“I think Esther’s skill was that she really understood how to use the platform she had to create an effect for, we hope ... the improvement of people in our country.”

Bold start for Burnham as he vows to drop 'Triple Lock' to fund UK care system

"There is only one real answer. A person-centred, high-quality care service that starts in the home, where everyone contributes and everyone is covered, free at the point of use"

Andy Burnham used his first speech as party leader at the Labour Party Conference to outline drastic reforms to the UK's care systems, and also vowed to take many water companies back into private ownership. And, to the surprise of many at Westminster, he vowed to drop the so called 'Triple Lock' pension scheme to pay for it.

In a sometimes emotional speech in Liverpool, Mr Burnham spoke about his father who died last month after suffering from Alzheimer's as he promised to make the cost of social care free at the point of use. Burnham told his conference that he'd left Westminster nearly a decade ago in part because of his frustration over the social care crisis.

impassioned speech

He portrayed himself as a political outsider who had returned to change the system. In a speech which was highly personal and impassioned, he recounted his late grandmother's struggles in the care system and praised the care staff who'd looked after his late father.

So it was perhaps unsurprising in a speech packed with policies that reform of social care in England took centre stage.

"If we carry on like this conference, broken social care will break the NHS too, and we can't let that happen," he said.

"There is only one real answer. A person-centred, high-quality care service that starts in the home, where everyone contributes and everyone is covered, free at the point of use, and no care charges paid out of your basic state pension."

This new national care service wouldn't be introduced in this parliament. Mr Burnham would have to win the next election. And while personal care such as help with dressing and washing would be free for the elderly, the food and accommodation costs in care homes would still incur a charge.

To help pay for an increased social care budget, the Prime Minister said the existing pensions triple lock would be replaced.

"it stinks"

Burnham also opened the way for the re-nationalisation of the water industry. He described the sector as a symbol of what had gone wrong with Britain, as he promised legislation which would repeal a ban on the public ownership of water companies.

Burnham said of private ownership of the vital public utility: "It stinks," before talking against some companies siphoning off profits while leaving sewage in the country's waterways. His remarks came on the same day that South West Water was fined nearly £8m for sewage spills.

His remedy removed what he described as an ideological Thatcher-era ban on public ownership of water firms. Greater power for mayors to hold water companies to account, tougher consequences for failure, and closing loopholes used to pay excessive bonuses were required, he said.

However, he also said that where private ownership serves the public, the government would support it.

He also announced a new scheme to help get young people on the property ladder.

housing help

In a scheme reminiscent of George Osborne's help to buy, the government is to provide equity loans of 20% of our property's value to young people seeking to get on the housing ladder. The loan will be interest free for an unspecified period of time. It will be aimed at those without family help and be available to those with a deposit of as little as 2.5 percent.

UK huddles with EU amid Trump diesel ban threat

PAIN AT THE PUMP: Diesel prices in the UK closed in on £12 per gallon as Donald Trump's war on Iran continued to hurt European consumers Britain is in talks with EU partners to release additional strategic fuel reserves, including diesel, if needed.

The talks come after President Donald Trump threatened to ban diesel exports from the US in a bid to reduce record prices at the pumps for Americans.

Diesel prices in the UK also hit record highs this week and are hovering just under 200p per liter (about $12/gallon) according to motoring organization the RAC.

The US is a vital supplier of diesel to the world, exporting between 1.2 and 1.5 million cont. on page 3, col. 1

One arrested, five released after mystery 'terror' incident at RAF base

■ Five previously arrested for loitering outside of RAF Fairford in wee small hours

Detectives have arrested a dual UK-Iranian national on suspicion of terrorism offences as part of an investigation into a suspected plot near RAF Fairford.

Counter-terrorism police said the 25-year-old man was arrested on Thursday in Westminster on suspicion of preparing terrorist acts under section 5 of the Terrorism Act 2006.

Five men in their 20s were arrested in the village of Whelford, Gloucestershire, outside the RAF base in the early hours of Sunday after police were alerted to suspicious vans in the area. They were released on police bail.

Announcing the most recent arrest, Vicki Evans, the senior national coordinator for counter-terrorism police, said: "As we've made clear, we're looking at all possible angles – including possible foreign state involvement."

Counter-terrorism police said two properties had been searched in Westminster, London.

"hugely complex"

Evans added: "The investigation into circumstances surrounding events in Gloucestershire is hugely complex, and our specialist teams are interrogating multiple lines of inquiry."

An Iranian link to the events in the Gloucestershire countryside over the weekend is considered increasingly likely, as the police and security services' investigation continues. Senior US politicians, including the president, Donald Trump, have expressed surprise that the suspects were released on bail.

It was revealed on Sunday that a farmer driving home from a party at about 1am on Sunday had spotted the men and vans and called 999.

But on Tuesday it emerged that one of the five men arrested near the base called the police to report the incident.

The mounting view among investigators that Iran was likely involved was a key reason for Andy Burnham's decision to call a meeting of Cobra, the government's crisis committee, on Monday, which was attended by senior police and security officials.

Tensions have been high at RAF Fairford since Iran's Revolutionary Guards said in July that the base was a legitimate target. Iran's embassy in London has denied any involvement in the events of the past few days.

Ministers have been briefed that Iran has various reasons for hiring proxies, who sometimes are unwitting, to carry out acts that aim to eat up resources and create chaos.

The suspects were first

Iran's Revolutionary Guards said in July that the base became a legitimate target when the UK allowed it to be used by the USAF for their bombing raids in Iran arrested on explosives charges and then later for preparing acts of terrorism. The decision on Monday to bail the men came after an examination of what was found in the vans, and searches of addresses linked to them across London, all of which found no evidence of a viable device.

Counter-terrorism police are leading the investigation, which is trying to establish why the five men, all British nationals from London, were in the Gloucestershire countryside, close to a sensitive site in the middle of the night.

The vans were marked with the logo of a legitimate fuel transit company that later denied ownership of the vehicles.

People detained for terrorism offences can be detained under two legal schedules that dictate how long they can be held without charge.

Under the terrorism schedule, a suspect can be held for up to 14 days but cannot be bailed.

The Iranian embassy in London has said it "categorically rejects and strongly condemns the recent unfounded and malicious speculations" of Iranian involvement.

Eighty-five households were forced to decamp to a leisure centre on Sunday as the bomb squad and counter-terror police descended on Whelford.

Some of the evacuated residents were able to stay with families, about 60 people received support from a Cotswold district council rest centre in Cirencester, and 28 people were accommodated overnight in hotels.

barrels per day, with experts warning a ban on shipments abroad could put further pressure on prices in other countries.

"We're thinking about it very seriously," Trump said of an export ban at the weekend.

On Thursday Trump added that he may ask European countries to release some of their diesel reserves, while his Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent said they should do so "immediately".

"Our European partners should accelerate delivery on their existing commitments and make additional supplies immediately available to address ongoing disruptions," he said in a post on social media.

He added that "American farmers, truckers, and businesses should not be left carrying the burden of a global diesel shortage".

Andy Burnham: UK could 'go all the way' by rejoining EU

PM says he is looking at all options and ministers will examine 'what is doable'

Andy Burnham has opened the door to the UK rejoining the EU, saying Britain could "go all the way", as he prepares to reconsider Labour's post-Brexit red lines.

The prime minister used a series of interviews to spell out how wide-ranging his consideration of Britain's future with Brussels could be because Brexit had caused "more harm than good".

Burnham said the government could keep the current arrangements, seek a customs union, return to the single market or "go all the way" in what would be full EU membership. Speaking to the BBC, he said ministers would examine "what is doable" and the "pros and cons" of each option.

Asked whether he wanted the UK to rejoin the bloc, the prime minister said he wanted to "look at the options".

He added: "We could stay as we are. That's definitely an option, if people think this is the right place to stay. We could look at what George Osborne has said about a customs union, we could look at what the Liberal Democrats said at their conference about the single market or we could go all the way."

It is a significant shift from the position Labour fought the 2024 election on. Its manifesto explicitly ruled out returning to the EU single market or customs union, as well as restoring freedom of movement.

A customs union would bring Britain much closer to the EU on trade in goods. The UK and EU would apply the same tariffs to imports from elsewhere, removing trade barriers businesses have faced after Brexit.

But it would not on its own put Britain back inside the wider single market or remove every border check.

If Britain were to rejoin the single market, it

Royal couple blast 'reckless' foreign snappers

THE DUKE and Duchess of Sussex have branded two photographers spotted outside the gates of Prince Archie and Princess Lilibet's school as "extraordinarily reckless".

Harry and Meghan said in a statement released on their behalf on Tuesday that it was "concerning" two international paparazzi undertook an "unacceptable intrusion into the privacy of children".

The photographers were spotted on Monday lurking near the school, which has not been made public.

The men were seen by private security and school staff carrying backpacks as they stopped at various points peering into the grounds.

They were initially seen separately then observed together before returning to a white van, which police established was a rental vehicle.

Investigators later identified the driver's licence used to hire the van belonged to an international press photographer. Both men have since been identified as two snappers working for a known European press agency.

A spokesman for the Duke and Duchess said: "The decision by photographers to conduct themselves in this way around a school is extraordinarily reckless.

"It is concerning enough certain European paparazzi appear unwilling to respect the privacy of children at school. But to behave in this manner in these circumstances, and so soon after the incident at RAF Fairford, demonstrates an extraordinary lack of judgment."

Tensions high in Armagh as Drum Cree stand-off goes on

- Controversial parade was banned for almost 30 years before legal reversal earlier this year
- Orange Order refuse to divert their route away from the largely Catholic Garvaghy Road

Talks were continuing late this week to resolve the stalemate over a contentious parade in County Armagh amid rising tensions in Northern Ireland.

At press time Members of the Orange Order are still waiting to begin the Drum Cree Parade, which was scheduled for this past Sunday, but was delayed due to fears of violence as large crowds of Catholics opposing the march massed along the Garvaghy Road.

The event, which celebrates the Protestant victory in the 1609 Battle of the Boyne, began in 1807, but increasing violence during the troubles led to its ban in 1998 by the newly-formed Parades Commission.

However, that decision was overturned by the High Court earlier this year, prompting fears of large-scale confrontations of the sort the scarred the town in the 1970s and 1980s.

'catastrophic'

On Thursday a Belfast High Court appeal by the Garvaghy Road Residents' Coalition to stop the march was put back till Monday to facilitate ongoing talks.

The hearing had been due to take place on Friday. The postponement comes as residents travelled to Hillsborough Castle on Thursday night for talks with Northern Secretary Chris Bryant in an attempt to break the deadlock.

The Drumcree policing operation has cost about £3 million (€3.5 million) so far, Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) chief constable Jon Boutcher said earlier on Thursday.

Addressing the Northern Ireland Policing Board in Belfast, Boutcher also warned that the consequences of forcing an Orange Order march down the Garvaghy Road in Portadown, Co Armagh, "could be catastrophic" for Northern Ireland.

robust exchanges

This current standoff has seen residents blocking the road and Orangemen refusing to disperse or take another route.

The political fallout has been significant. The Democratic Unionist Party leader Gavin Robinson said the First Minister, Michelle O'Neill and other Sinn Féin politicians had taken part in an unlawful protest when they demonstrated with the nationalist residents. The DUP shares power with Sinn Féin in the devolved government.

Mr Robinson said the DUP had asked the police to investigate.

"The Police Service of Northern Ireland, if their job is to do anything, it's to uphold and enforce the law," he said.

"And there is an onus on them to demonstrate clearly that the law applies equally to everyone, that nobody irrespective of rank has a free pass."

He stopped short of saying the DUP would collapse the power-sharing coalition if a solution was not found soon. In the Stormont Assembly, there were robust exchanges as the Sinn Féin Minister John O'Dowd defended his party's actions, in organizing opposition to the march and filling the streets with protesters.

"I and other Sinn Féin members stood on the Garvaghy Road over the weekend to ensure that there will never ever be a return to second-class citizenship unnecessarily," he said.

No turning back on road to independence, says Welsh leader

Wales' first minister has said there is "no turning back" on the journey to independence for the country, as he attended a rally on Saturday.

In a speech addressing the crowd gathered in Aberystwyth, Ceredigion, Rhun ap Iorwerth said the "next step" for Wales had to be "equality with Scotland, as a minimum".

Thousands were in attendance, with the event organisers, campaign group Yes Cymru, saying it estimated the march attracted between 8,000 and 9,000 people.

"[Wales is] on a journey, and there's no turning back," ap Iorwerth said.

'real difference'

Since 2019, thousands have taken part in independence marches across Wales, including in Cardiff, Swansea, Wrexham, Merthyr Tydfil, Rhyl and Barry.

But this was the first time the first minister of Wales had attended a Yes Cymru march.

A Reform Cymru Member of the Senedd (MS) said he was "disappointed" by the first minister's decision to attend, while a Welsh Conservative MS said it would be "better for him to be behind his desk in Cathays sorting the problems he said he would sort out".

Following the march, a rally in Castle Gardens featured speeches, including from the first minister, as well as Yes Cymru's chairman Rob Hughes and Elwyn Vaughan, Plaid Cymru MS for Gwynedd Maldwyn.

It was the first march since pro-independence party Plaid Cymru came into government in Wales following the Senedd elections in May.

Ap Iorwerth said: "We are standing up for Wales, pursuing the investment and greater powers we need from Westminster now, so we can make a real difference to people's lives as the next step in our constitutional journey."

In his speech, the Plaid Cymru MS for Bangor Conwy Môn referenced Prime Minister Andy Burnham's comments on Friday, ruling out the handing of powers to hold a referendum on independence to the Welsh government.

"The right to self-determination is not a right that the UK government is willing to acknowledge," ap Iorwerth said

Bulger killer's latest parole bid to be heard in private Child killer Jon Venables will have his latest parole bid heard in private, despite a plea from his victim's mother for it to be public, the Parole Board has decided.

Venables, 44, who tortured and murdered two-year-old James Bulger in 1993, will have his case heard by parole chiefs at an oral hearing, almost three years after his last appeal. James's mother, Denise Fergus, had demanded that the hearing be held in public to help combat "misinformation" about the case which had a "re-traumatising impact" on her.

Parole Board hearings are usually held in private, but they can be made public "in the interests of justice". A number of media organisations also applied for a public hearing.

In reaching its decision, the Parole Board said a public hearing would make it "very difficult for Jon Venables to give evidence" because he could be "being listened to by people who are seeking to get information so that they can kill him".

In 2023, the Parole Board rejected Venables's bid for freedom and found he still posed a danger to children and could go on to offend again. Venables was jailed alongside Robert Thompson after the pair of 10-year-olds snatched James from a shopping centre in Bootle, Merseyside, in February 1993.

Venables was released on licence in July 2001 and recalled to prison in February 2010 after indecent images of children were found on his computer. He was once again freed in August 2013 and then called back in November 2017 for the same offence, with parole judges considering his case again in September 2020.

would be a significant step with the country having to accept closer alignment with EU rules.

"There are clearly options that need to be considered, and we have to look at what is doable and what would be the pros and cons of each," Burnham said.

Although Burnham has not set out any time-tables or specifics, to "go all the way" would mean considering EU membership. He went further in his interviews on Wednesday than his conference speech in which he told delegates Britain could not keep avoiding a decision about its long-term relationship with its largest trading partner.

"We've been in a rut. The country hasn't been working for people as it should," he added.

Bodana Sivanandan took up chess during the Covid lockdown

London chess player becomes youngest Woman Grand Master

An 11-year-old British girl has become the youngest chess player in history to earn the Women Grand Master title.

Bodana Sivanandan from Northwest London secured the title while representing England at the 46th Chess Olympiad in Uzbekistan.

Bodana was already the UK's youngest women's chess champion and the youngest person to represent England internationally in any sport. But this weekend she played all 11 rounds on England's top board - that's the position assigned to the team's best player and finished the tournament with eight points. She spoke to the International Chess Federation afterwards.

"I'm happy to do it, but I want to keep going and keep making history as well instead of just stop here."

Bodana first started playing chess when she was five during lockdown. By the time she was eight, she became the youngest person to draw against the Grand Master at a European Championship. A year later, the youngest female player to defeat one.

Now, at the ripe old age of 11, she's grown in stature and reputation, but clearly, in centimeters, just a few. Bodana still needs to sit on a car booster seat at tournaments...

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the WILL or estate, or both of KATHLEEN MARY ROCHE. A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by STEPHEN A. ROCHE in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES. THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that STEPHEN A. ROCHE be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A HEARING on the petition will be held in this court as follows: 10/09/26 at 8:30AM in Dept. 615B located at 111 N. HILL ST., LOS ANGELES, CA 90012
IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.
Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. Rome comes home: Turner's masterpiece returns for brief visit to the city which inspired it

■ Rome, From Mount Aventine, painted in 1820, goes on the auction block in December, where it is expected to fetch £50m

A painting that has been dubbed "Turner's great love letter to Rome" made a brief return this week to the city which inspired it.

"Rome, From Mount Aventine" features a dreamy golden-coloured landscape of the city viewed from the hills, and was painted by the British master in 1820. Now, it has returned the Eternal City - for three days only. It will then move to Hong Kong and New York before being transported back to London where it is expected to fetch £50m when auctioned by Sotheby's on 9 December.

The masterpiece was last bought in 2014 when a private collector paid £30.3m, making it the most expensive painting by the artist ever sold to date.

The golden-hued work is still on its original canvas and in its original frame. Furthermore, it has never been relined or restored, with marks made by Turner's palette knife and brushes still visible, as well as his fingerprints from when he would have picked the canvas up to move it around his studio.

"depth and glow"

"Because it's unlined, the surface of the picture is extraordinarily well preserved," Julian Gascoigne, a senior specialist at Sotheby's London, told reporters in Rome. "You can see all the delicate glazes of translucent paint that he's built up over successive painting sessions that give the picture this extraordinary sense of light and depth and glow. You can see the teeth of the brush and the scrape of the palette knife in a way that is not really seen in almost any other work by the artist."

The painting has exchanged hands only twice since it was commissioned by Hugh Andrew Johnstone Munro of Novar, an amateur British artist who accompanied Turner on his sketching tours, in the late 1820s.

Turner began the work in Rome and completed it in London, where it was displayed for the first time

CIAO, BELLA: The classic JMW Turner landscape features a dreamy golden-coloured prospect of the city viewed from the hills at the Royal Academy to mixed reviews in 1836.

The painting remained in Munro's estate until 1878, when it was bought by Archibald Primrose, the 5th Earl of Rosebery and a prominent 19th-century British prime minister, as a wedding gift for his bride, Hannah de Rothschild.

Turner first visited Rome in 1819 and then again in the late 1820s, when he was part of a thriving community of artists, sculptors, writers and poets based in the area of the Spanish Steps.

Turner, who died in 1851, produced several paintings of the city. "However, this is the only painting by the artist of Rome as it looked during his time," Gascoigne said. "Every other painting he did of Rome was an evocation of a bygone age. But this is the only portrait of the city. In many ways, it's his great love letter to the city that inspired him throughout his life."

Mario Tavella, the chair of Sotheby's Europe, said he hoped the painting would be bought by a public museum "where it could be admired by everyone".

Welsh find a way to stun Norway

Wales claimed the most notable scalp of the Craig Bellamy era on Thursday as they came from behind to end their winless run with a 2-1 Nations League triumph over 10-man Norway.

Bellamy's team looked destined for a long night when Oscar Bobb poked Norway into an early lead at the Cardiff City Stadium.

But Wales deservedly levelled before half-time when Dan James swept in from Sorba Thomas' cross.

Norway centre-back Torbjorn Heggem handed Wales further momentum when he was sent off for dragging James down on the edge of the penalty area inside the opening 30 seconds of the second half.

Neco Williams ensured there was double punishment for Heggem's foul, as he deceived Orjan Nyland with a clever free-kick which curled inside the Norway keeper's right-hand post.

This was a timely, morale-boosting triumph for Wales, who had been under pressure to deliver a result after failing to win in their previous six internationals.

It was a first victory over a team ranked higher in the world since Bellamy took charge in 2024 and – at the ninth attempt – a maiden success for Wales in Nations League A.

Wales had fallen behind to the game's first attack of note, with Bobb feeding Martin Odegaard and then darting in behind the static Welsh backline to accept his captain's return pass.

That left Fulham winger Bobb to poke the ball beyond the advancing Danny Ward and inside the near post.

With confidence low, Wales might have folded – yet Bellamy's team responded by taking the game to Norway.

Thomas was a menace down the left flank, with Wales knocking on the door without finding a path to goal until Liam Cullen picked off Fredrik Aursnes' pass seven minutes before half-time.

Wales pounced decisively, with Lewis Koumas working the ball wide for Thomas to tee up James' 11th international goal.

The red card came when, having failed to deal with Ben Davies' hopeful ball forward, Heggem locked arms with James and sent the Wales winger tumbling to the turf.

Nyland might then have done better as he took a step to his left before Williams' precise set-piece went in on the former Aston Villa keeper's right-hand post.

Wales had chances to extend their lead, with substitutes Josh Sheehan and Mark Harris denied by Nyland, before Norway rallied in the closing stages.

It was not until nine minutes from time that Erling Haaland had a sight of goal, the striker rising high to meet a Marcus Pedersen cross but heading straight at Ward.

When Jorgen Stand Larsen blasted over late on, Wales' job was done.

Swiss find plenty of holes in Scottish defence

Sebastien Pocognoli's Hampden debut flipped swiftly from special to sour as 10-man Scotland were outclassed by Switzerland 3-0 in the Nations League on Tuesday.

The head coach, who started his reign with a goalless draw in Slovenia on Saturday, was hoping for "fire" in Mount Florida. Instead, though, he witnessed a cold, cruel lesson from major tournament-regulars Switzerland after a nightmarish start.

Dan Ndoye streaked away from Jack Hendry and the centre-back shoved the Nottingham Forest forward as he bore down on Angus Gunn.

Initially, referee Nenad Minakovic pointed to the spot and flashed a yellow card. But, after a lengthy VAR check, both decisions were changed as a free-kick was awarded instead and Hendry's yellow upgraded to a red.

That was bad, but it got even worse. From the free-kick, veteran full-back Ricardo Rodriguez rocketed past Gunn to open the scoring.

Striker Kieron Bowie was sacrificed for defender Stephen Welsh - left out initially in favour of debutant Luis Binks - as Pocognoli was forced to tweak his plan.

But the Scots didn't buckle, showing organisation and the ability to stifle - and occasionally rattle - the Swiss - who were without Granit Xhaka and Breel Embolo - in the remainder of the half.

However, Pocognoli's side - who remain on one point and in third place in Group B1 - were all too easily cut through as Ndoye's neat cross was cutely converted by Leeds United defender Nico Elvedi 10 minutes into the second half.

From there, the game became a non-event. By the time Zeki Amdouni arowed in the visitors' third, swathes of Scotland supporters had already headed for the exit.

They'll be back next Tuesday as the Scots host Slovenia, but first they travel to Skopje on Saturday to take on North Macedonia as Pocongoli's aims for third time lucky for his first win - and goal.

It's difficult to judge his Hampden bow, with the outlook skewed by that early dismissal for Hendry. The Al-Ettifaq centre-back was a bit careless in Ljubljana and could have no complaints with his red for a clumsy foul which cost his team.

DON'T DELAY CITY PUNISHMENT!

■ Premier League urged to take action before end of the season after City found guilty on ALL charges of financial regulation breaches MANCHESTER CITY'S punishment for breaching Premier League rules should be handed down before the end of this season, senior football figures said on Thursday.

The Premier League said earlier this week that City had been found guilty of all charges relating to breaches of its financial regulations between the 2009-10 and 2017-18 seasons.

They included artificially inflating revenue by more than £900m through 'sham' sponsorship deals.

City have repeatedly denied guilt and signalled an intent to lodge an appeal by the end of this week.

There have been fears that the process, which has taken three years since City were charged, could be drawn out for much longer.

However, senior figures within football have said they see no reason why the case cannot be concluded by the end of this season.

Speaking on condition of anonymity, one club official said: "It benefits everyone for this to be resolved as quickly as possible."

When asked if they believed it would be, they said: "Instinctively yes, but it has to be done right."

"We can all see what the risks are if it's not. But those risks have been there throughout the process, as they've won the league multiple times during it."

Another source said the process "should" be resolved by the end of the season, and they hoped any appeal would be "compressed".

The final decision rests in the hands of the independent commission, with the Premier League board - and City - able to suggest a suitable punishment before the panel makes its decision.

There is increasingly a desire to have the case resolved by the end of the season amid fears that allowing City to get to the end of the campaign without punishment could lead to uncertainty and farce, particularly if they were to win the title.

One section of the Premier League regulations says an appeal should conclude no more than 12 weeks after it is filed, and a decision should be made within 30 days of its end, although it is unclear whether this would apply in City's case.

Procedures can be hurried to meet certain deadlines, like the end of a league season.

However, Ferran Soriano, the club's chief executive, has suggested the case will run for a long time.

City cannot make a further appeal to the Court of Arbitration for Sport (Cas), but could potentially claim the process was not impartial at the High Court.

The Premier League's statement, formally announcing the guilty verdicts read on Monday, said it wants the process to be "concluded as soon as possible".
