HARRY: I WANT TO RECONCILE

■ Duke of Sussex says 'there's enough drama in the world' without continuing to have issues with his family

The Duke of Sussex wants to repair his difficult relationship with his father and brother, he has said.

Speaking to GQ magazine in New York, Prince Harry said of his complicated relationship with William and King Charles that from a family perspective it was a "massively relatable issue for so many people".

"There's sibling disagreements, there's broken relationships between kids and their parents, kids and one parent," he said.

"That continues to come up with me the whole time by people that I speak to, so I know how relatable it is.

"That's partly probably why there's so much fascination ... People maybe look at us and go: 'How are you going to work it out?' Then: 'Maybe how I see you're going to work it out, maybe that will help me work my stuff out.'

"Some people don't want it to work out. I want it to work out. With everything else that's going on in the world, the most important thing is to reconcile. That's the key point."

Asked if he thought he could repair "this wound", Harry said: "Yeah, of course ... look, scars stick around forever but ... certainly letting go of the past, that's something that I would encourage everybody to do.

'so important'

"If there's certain things from the past that's still affecting your everyday, that's harder to let go of.

"But yeah, for me, there's enough drama in the world and enough drama in people's lives than to continue with issues with family."

A spokesperson for the Sussexes later clarified that Harry's comments were not intended as a swipe at Prince William or directed at any of the royal family in any way, but were made in a general context.

The interview, conducted last month, was released on the GQ website as the royal family welcomed the Sultan of Oman to Windsor Castle for a state visit.

Speaking of moving his family to the UK, Harry said they returned for "opportunities, for the family, being able to put the kids in British schools meant a lot to me".

He added: "I didn't know how important it was to me. I always thought it was going to be something I would try and do or that we would try and do, but now they've been in school for two weeks they're loving it and it's just giving them a whole different experience. Don't worry, I'm not criticising American schools."

He added it was "so important" for his children, Archie, seven, and Lilibet, five, to have two "completely different cultural experiences".

Harry, who spoke about dealing with grief and trauma after his mother's death, said he hoped sharing his

"...letting go of the past, that's something that I would encourage everybody to do," said Harry this week experience would help others rather than garnering public sympathy for himself.

"I certainly don't want any sympathy. Why? Because I'm a prince. I've got a support network around me, I've done different forms of therapy, and I put in the work. I wonder where I would be if I didn't - it could be a very different situation," he said

Judge orders Trump to attend deposition in BBC lawsuit

A US judge has ordered President Donald Trump to answer questions under oath in his defamation lawsuit against the BBC by 11 December.

Trump is suing the BBC over an episode of Panorama that edited together two different sections of a speech he gave before the riot at the US Capitol in 2021.

Charles Tobin, a lawyer representing the BBC, said in court that "we still haven't been able to depose the plaintiff" with two months left in the discovery period, during which both sides are legally required to exchange information with each other on their case.

Trump cancelled a previous deposition on 16 October, citing "matters of national importance" while he was campaigning in Georgia.

In US law, a deposition is an out-of-court statement made under oath in response to questions, which is recorded for use in later proceedings.

The judge in the case, US Magistrate Judge Enjolie Lett, said that Trump must sit for the deposition by 11 December, unless the discovery period is extended.

Green Party leader 'a danger to British Jews'

■ Polanski refuses to back down from 'Zionism is Racism' motion

Zack Polanski has been branded a danger to British Jews after the Green leader defended the party's "Zionism is Racism" motion.

When questioned on the BBC's influential TV show Sunday with Laura Kuenssberg, he was keen to dodge growing claims of antisemitism in his party. But Mr Polanski, who is Jewish, refused even to say whether he believes Israel has a right to exist.

Asked if he thinks Zionism is racist, he said: "I don't think this is actually controversial."

"I think what's controversial is that 75,000 Palestinians have been murdered in the last few years, including more child amputees than ever in modern history.

"So when you take that into account – the fact that they're being murdered because they're Palestinian – that's very obviously a racist ideology."

And Mr Polanski confirmed the motion will not be overturned.

He said: "I might not agree with every single word in it, I might want to see it amended in the future...[but] I'm not going to try and overturn it."

Mr Polanski's leadership of the Green Party has been under scrutiny after he missed the crucial conference vote which endorsed the policy effectively calling for Israel to be abolished and replaced with a single Palestinian state.

He claimed he was too busy campaigning for his unsuccessful bid in this month's Holborn and St Pancras by-election for the seat vacated by former Prime Minister Sir Keir Starmer.

'safe place to live'

Former Green Party leader Caroline Lucas said Mr Polanski "should have been there and he should have voted".

But defending the policy on Sunday he dismissed the idea that for "many Jewish people, Zionism is simply the right to have a safe place to live".

He told the BBC: "I think that's what people think it means, but actually in practical application – which is what we're talking about here – that homeland has come at the cost of the Palestinian people.

"I want equal rights for Israelis and Palestinians, and practical application of Zionism has not resulted in that."

Shimon Cohen, of Jewish organisation Shechita UK, said: "Zack Polanski is a danger to British Jews. The reason isn't that he hates us. It's that he lacks the courage to stand up for us when it counts. He watched his party declare Zionism a form of racism, reviving a Soviet-era smear."

"He knew it would brand most British Jews

POLANSKI: "I don't think this is actually controversial."

as racists by association, and he equivocated. He still leads the party that passed it. In doing so, he has given respectability to a slur that fuels hatred on our streets."

Mr Cohen added: "Polanski rightly condemns the antisemitism aimed at him. But when the wider community reports fear after arson and stabbings, he dismisses concern as political weaponisation. Jewish safety cannot matter only when it is his own.

"The logic of the motion collapses under the slightest pressure. Is the SNP campaign for Scottish independence racist? Are Commonwealth republicans racist for wanting their own head of state? Every people's right to self-determination is respected except one. That's not anti-racism. It's the oldest prejudice in a new costume."

Tory activist suspended from party after 'negotiating contract killer'

■ Police in Scotland assessing documentary for potential criminality

An ex-Conservative candidate who leads the British offshoot of Charlie Kirk's Turning Point movement has been suspended from the party after appearing to discuss a contract killing.

In clips filmed secretly during the Tory Party Conference in 2022, Jack Ross seemingly sets out a list of actions a criminal contact can take.

He tells an undercover reporter: 'They can just kick the f out of some-

The footage features in a documentary from news channel Al Jazeera, which investigates links between the British right-wing and a Glasgow-based violent criminal.

Apparently referring to his contacts, Ross says in the video: 'They'll get someone to drive down from Scotland, or they've got locals in London who can help you out as well.'

In a separate clip, Ross appears to be willing to arrange a meeting between the undercover journalist and the criminal contact to help deal with a problem in a fictitious family business.

When the contact meets the Al Jazeera reporter in a London hotel, he appears to set out how to cover up a murder with a car by pretending it was a case of Police in Scotland said they are now assessing the documentary for potential criminality.

Meanwhile, the Tories confirmed Ross's membership of the party had been suspended while an investigation takes place.

As the CEO of Turning Point UK, Ross has been one of the most prominent figures in the British right-wing youth movement.

Conservative leader Kemi Badenoch last year showed her meeting Ross alongside other TPUK activists to discuss Charlie Kirk and his legacy.

The former Tory council candidate has also been pictured with Boris Johnson, James Cleverly and Jacob Rees-Mogg.

Al Jazeera said Ross denied the allegations made in the documentary 'completely', saying the suggestions he made to the undercover journalist were not to be taken seriously.

A spokesperson for the Conservative Party said: 'Mr Ross's membership of the Conservative Party has been suspended with immediate effect pending an investigation.'

'We cannot comment further while the investigation is ongoing.'

A Police Scotland spokesperson said: 'We're aware of the documentary. It will be reviewed and assessed for any criminality.'

On that day, Trump attended a midterms campaign rally in Dalton, Georgia and a fundraiser at his property in Mar-a-Lago in Florida.

not available in US

In a separate filing on Wednesday, Trump's lawyers said that the president could appear for the interview between 11 and 22 January next year, and claimed that the BBC was "wrong to claim that President Trump is avoiding his deposition in this action."

Trump's lawsuit - filed in Florida - accuses the BBC of "intentionally, maliciously, and deceptively doctoring" the speech he gave outside the Capitol on 6 January 2021.

The BBC apologized for the error and said that the broadcast gave "the mistaken impression that President Trump made a direct call for violent action".

The broadcaster has since asked that the court dismiss the lawsuit, arguing that the programme does not meet the legal criteria for defamation and was not available in the US.

In July, Trump's lawyers conceded that they had no evidence that the documentary was available in the US on legal weight

Trump ultimately agreed to drop the lawsuit against BBC Studios, its commercial arm, after the BBC argued that it had "no role in creating or producing the documentary".

Typically, depositions take place in a lawyer's office - rather than a courtroom - without a judge physically present.

Depositions, however, carry legal weight and take place under oath. They are recorded verbatim by a court reporter, and the transcripts can later be used as evidence during trials.

In defamation cases, lawyers for both sides are normally present for depositions.

Britain desperately needs more engineers, says Sir James Dyson

"Without them, we can't make things, invent new products and technologies – or compete against the rest of the world"

Sir James Dyson has called for a new wave of technical universities to help bring down the number of youngsters not in education, employment or training.

The Dyson founder warned Britain's lack of engineers could harm the country's competitiveness.

'university desert'

He backed a report from the Policy Exchange think-tank which called for more technical institutions to meet employers' skills needs.

Sir James said: "Britain doesn't produce enough engineers.

"Only about one in eleven British graduates studied engineering or related subjects.

"Without them, we can't make things, invent new products and technologies – or compete against the rest of the world. Britain needs many more places like these. This report shows how to build them."

Policy Exchange said there are 57 English towns and cities of 60,000 people or more that have no university of their own.

It warned one in 10 people in England – around 5.5 million people – live in a "university desert".

The organisation studied the New Model Institute for Technology and Engineering in Hereford, which has an employment-focused emphasis on technical and engineering skills.

inequality

Its report argued that NMITE's model should be replicated in other parts of the country.

Former Education Secretary Lord Blunkett said: "Differential access to skills is one of the key drivers of regional inequality across Britain.

terprises and the large infrastructure programmes, which will be the driving force of substantial economic growth."

'explicit focus'

Over a million 16 to 24-year-olds are not in education, employment or training, but employers report over 250,000 vacancies they cannot fill because applicants lack the required skills, qualifications or experience.

Report co-author Byron Evans said: "Our higher education system is beginning to buckle – contributing to regional, social and economic ills.

"British history and our European neighbours show that technical educational institutions require a distinct and explicit focus to guard against academic drift."

He added: "Fundamentally, a roll-out of NMITE-type universities offers much-needed diversity in degree-level provision while supporting the crucial bedrock of technical skills required for any serious re-industrialisation."

Assisted dying made legal in Isle of Man

BEREAVED families have celebrated after the Isle of Man became the second Crown Dependency to legalise assisted dying this week.

Historic legislation received Royal Assent on Wednesday following years of campaigning by locals including Sue Biggerstaff, 66.

Her husband Simon died from motor neurone disease in May 2022. She said: "Simon would have been eligible under this law, and I know he would have wanted the choice."

"It's too late for him, but it isn't too late for the next family. Knowing that no one else on this island will be forced to go through what Simon went through means everything to me."

Within a few months, Simon went from walking his dog Ella to being paralysed from the neck down, unable to speak and in agonising pain.

Sue shared his story with members of the House of Keys in Tynwald as they debated the legislation.

She added: "He was such a proud, active man, and motor neurone disease took everything from him so quickly. By the end he couldn't move, he could barely speak, and he was in so much pain that he would cry out. He pleaded with me to make it stop, and there was nothing I could do."

"Nobody should have to watch someone they love die like that, and nobody should have to die like that."

Sue paid tribute to the parliamentarians who backed the law and Dr Alex Allinson, who introduced the bill in 2023. The new law will permit assisted dying for adults who have lived on the island for at least five years.

Brand accusers tell jury why they kept silent for two decades

■ Women describe alleged assaults in a radio station corridor, a Soho bar and the comedian's London home, as defence team suggest their memories were shaped by later media coverage

SEVERAL women who accuse Russell Brand of sexual offences have described to a jury how they kept their allegations to themselves for years, as his trial at Southwark Crown Court entered its second week.

Brand, 51, is on trial for three counts of rape, three counts of sexual assault and one count of indecent assault relating to six women over a ten-year period from 1999 to 2009. He has pleaded not guilty to all seven charges and has previously told police he never engaged in any non-consensual sexual activity. Under UK law, the women are all granted lifelong anonymity.

'dirty and shaken'

On Tuesday, a woman who worked at a London radio station in the mid-2000s told jurors she was in the middle of her working day when she came face to face with Brand, whom she recognized immediately. She described him as an A-list celebrity at the time because he hosted a popular spin-off of Big Brother. She alleged he seized her face and kissed her while pressing his body against hers, then touched her bottom and breast, leaving her feeling 'dirty and shaken'. What stunned her most, she said, was that his entourage of three men and one woman were standing right there. "They did nothing," she told the court.

She said she managed to push him away and swore loudly at him as she escaped. She reported the incident to police in 2023 after seeing allegations about Brand in a documentary and a newspaper article. Asked by Brand's barrister, Ian Winter KC, why she had not come forward at the time, she said the culture at her workplace was toxic, she feared no one would believe her, and she worried she would lose her job and be unable to pay her mortgage. Becoming upset, she told jurors: "I was literally attacked at work."

'happened so fast'

Earlier in the week, the jury heard from a television worker who alleges Brand orally raped her in a Soho bar in 2004. In her police interview, she said Brand grabbed at her breasts after talking to her for barely a minute, then took her by the arm and pulled her into the toilets nearby. "It happened so fast," she said. She told the court she remembered thinking that if she complied, he might not go further.

Under cross-examination, Mr Winter asked why she had not told a single person until she contacted police in September 2023. She maintained she had told people at the time that Brand grabbed her breasts at the bar; Mr Winter suggested she had told no one.

A third woman, then working for a broadcaster in 2009, told the court Brand had grown increasingly unhappy during a project they were working on together, and that two of his male colleagues suggested she give him a massage. She said he came into the room and laid his head in her lap, leaving her uncomfortable, confused and shocked. She reported the incident to her line manager.

The jury was also shown a police interview with a woman who alleges Brand raped her at his home in 2009. She told a detective she met Brand after one of his shows at the Hammersmith Apollo, engaged in consensual oral sex with him in his dressing room, and was invited to his house the following week. She said what began as consensual sex changed suddenly into something she had not agreed to, and that he carried on despite her pleas. She alleges she told him to stop several times, first quietly and then very loudly.

'like an animal'

Jurors heard that, in the aftermath, she told Brand he had treated her

"like an animal", and that he looked horrified and told her to clean up. Her former manager told the jury the woman had said Brand became angry with her at his house over the state of his bedsheets.

Cross-examined, the woman acknowledged she had been a huge fan, obsessed with him, and had gone to his home willingly. When Mr Winter put it to her that she had not responded at the time by accusing him of rape, she agreed she had not, while maintaining that she did not consent.

The week's evidence followed testimony from the first two complainants. A woman who says she was raped in a Bournemouth hotel room during the 1999 Labour Party conference told the jury Brand had disarmed her into feeling safe before turning on her, and estimated that she weighed around seven stone at the time while he was much heavier. A former MTV worker said Brand was friendly at first but changed suddenly as he tried to pull her into a toilet in 2001.

Throughout, Mr Winter has challenged the accounts, arguing that the encounters were consensual, physically impossible, or misremembered by women who may have reimagined events after later media reports. He has put to complainants that their recollections could have been altered by the 2023 coverage that followed a joint investigation by The Sunday Times and Channel 4's Dispatches.

Brand, who sat listening in the glass-walled dock, denies all wrongdoing. The trial, expected to last at least six weeks, continues.

King honors Aberfan dead on “the most tragic of days imaginable”

■ Charles, Camilla and the Prince of Wales joined survivors and bereaved families on Wednesday at the tragic Welsh village

The King has described the Aberfan disaster which killed 116 children and 28 adults as the “most tragic of days imaginable” on its 60th anniversary.

Pantglas Junior School and a number of nearby houses in the village near Merthyr Tydfil, south Wales, were catastrophically engulfed in coal slurry after the colliery spoil tip collapsed on 21 October 1966.

King Charles III, Queen Camilla and the Prince of Wales joined survivors and bereaved families on Wednesday and laid wreaths and a posy with the last surviving teacher in the Aberfan Memorial Garden, located on the site of the school.

The King also paid tribute to the community’s strength, resilience and “unconquerable spirit”.

About half the children from the school died when excavated mining debris from the Merthyr Vale Colliery was dislodged, and 150,000 tonnes of coal waste came thundering down the hillside.

Emergency services, miners and people who rushed to the village began an around-the-clock battle to dig out those trapped by the debris. An official inquiry found the National Coal Board was responsible for the disaster, but no-one has ever been prosecuted.

On Friday morning a minute’s silence was held at 09:15 BST to mark the moment the coal spoil struck the village, and church bells rang 144 times for each child and adult who died.

Pupils at Ynysowen Community Primary School, which was built to carry on the legacy of Pantglas, also gathered to pay their respects.

The royals joined survivors, bereaved parents and members of the community in the memorial garden to pay tribute to all those who lost their lives, followed by a visit to the nearby Aberfan and Merthyr Vale Community Centre.

First Minister Rhun ap Iorwerth also greeted crowds of people in Aberfan, with flowers that Aberfan victims would have seen in their gardens chosen for the wreaths laid in the garden.

The coal waste had been piled high on the side of Mynydd Merthyr - above Aberfan - for years, even though there were numerous underground springs below.

An official inquiry in 1967 found the National Coal Board was responsible for the Aberfan disaster, but survivors and bereaved families have long pointed to a litany of injustices.

Money was taken from the public disaster fund to help pay for the removal of remaining coal tips above the village, while compensation payments were limited and survivors had to undergo repeated assessments.

Support to help deal with their trauma was also minimal.

Professor Iain McLean, co-author of Aberfan - Government and Disaster, has questioned why nobody was ever prosecuted for the disaster.

Speaking on a BBC phone in on Wednesday, he said: “And so one of the other failures of the government of the day is their, to me, incomprehensible failure to sack Lord Robens and his senior directors.”

Robens was the chairman of the National Coal Board at the time, and had faced numerous complaints about the dangers that loomed a quarter of a mile high above the village.

One of these included a petition from Pantglas school in 1963, three years before the disaster.

In 1997, McLean met three of the counsels who had appeared before the 1967 tribunal and asked why no legal action was taken.

“They all said ‘nobody thought of it at the time’,” he said.

On Wednesday the Royal Family met retired members of the emergency services at the community centre who helped in the hours and days after the disaster.

They then spent time with survivors, bereaved parents and siblings of those who died.

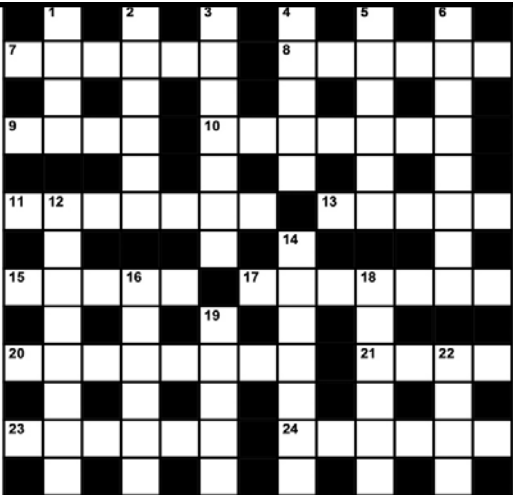

In a speech to those in the community centre, King Charles said the disaster “was and always will be, the saddest and most tragic of days imaginable”.

He said: “Over the years, as once again today, it has been profoundly humbling to hear the testimonies of survivors of relatives who lost their loved ones, and of rescuers who fought so hard to save others during this appalling tragedy.

“Today in our nation and across the world, thoughts will turn to you in Aberfan, hearts far from this valley will ache with yours.”

BUM DEAL! Red-faced Texas GOP boss left butt hurt after Ali G star tricks him into firing bullets out of a plastic posterior

A TEXAS Republican bigwig has been left with egg on his face, and a fake bum strapped to his rear, after falling hook, line and sinker for comedy prankster Sacha Baron Cohen's latest stitch-up.

Michael Aboud, chairman of the El Paso County Republican Party, is now threatening to drag the funnyman to court after discovering he'd been made a right Charlie in the new film Ali G: Who Iz I?, according to a report in The Guardian on Thursday.

The hapless politico had been told he was starring in a serious documentary about immigration. Instead, he found himself taking orders from Col. Erran Morad, Baron Cohen's fictional ex-Israeli spook, last seen making mugs of the great and good in the 2018 series Who Is America?

In scenes that will have viewers choking on their tea, Aboud and a gaggle of MAGA faithful are put through a "self-defence" course that involves strapping on a protective plastic buttock.

But that's not the half of it. The red-blooded recruits are then taught how to fire bullets from the middle of said buttocks by stroking a rubber willy. You couldn't make it up. Well, Sacha could, and did.

Baby bombshell

Things went from bum to worse when the gullible gang were signed up for a top-secret "mission" to stop the child of a South American drug lord being born on US soil.

The plan? Kidnap a heavily pregnant woman, played by comedy actress Morgana Robinson, and whisk her off to an abandoned medical facility. After a staged birth involving a rubber baby, the would-be commandos are seen driving the "infant" towards Mexico. And in one jaw-dropping scene, Aboud opts to drop the prosthetic sprog from a drone rather than let it

Six of the Best for winningest team

Brits in LA Pub Quiz history was made this week when Going for Six became the first trivia team ever to win the contest six weeks in a row.

They are pictured (above) being presented with their trophy and greatest of all time award - which meant Let Them Eat Cake had to settle for the consolation potato.

There will be a Halloween theme next time - Oct 27 at 8pm at O'Briens in Santa Monica - with a costume contest and spooky questions, but will anyone be able to beat this scarily good team?

Ali G:

set foot in America.

'not one penny'
Astonishingly, despite being asked to shoot bullets out of a fake bottom, Aboud insists he had absolutely no idea he was being had. He claims he genuinely believed he was taking part in a documentary about illegal crossings at the southern border.

Hopping mad, he blasted Baron Cohen and his crew for the deception, saying: "No one should spend one penny watching anything he produces or appears in. I plan to sue him."

The film itself confirms that participants weren't in on the joke.

Not everyone is quite so sore about it, mind. Fellow MAGA fan Joshua Loudermilk, who appears alongside Aboud, couldn't stop gushing about his big-screen debut online.

"I got to spend 12 hours one on one with Sasha [sic] and he taught me soooo much about the fun of making others laugh," he beamed, sharing a link to the trailer and proudly announcing: "I am in the trailer."

On 10 January he even posted a glossy headshot, declaring: "Howdy. Done with Sasha Cohen movie and ready for more."

There's just one snag: producers say Loudermilk didn't know he'd been pranked either.

Bless.
The pair are in familiar company. The film also features disgraced former Republican congressman George Santos, while Rudy Giuliani was famously caught out by Cohen in his Who Is America? series back in 2020.

Looks like Aboud's legal threat may be the only thing in this story with less ammunition than a plastic bottom.

ARIES: Now that your boss Mars is visiting Leo, it's a time to shine and get out and about. This time is not so good for completing long-term plans, so just give it a couple of weeks.

TAURUS: Relationships of all kinds have taken on a different vibe over the last week or so. Be careful how you deal with others with whom you may have differences. The full moon is currently in your sign, so it's not a good time to get into arguments.

GEMINI: You should be prepared over the next few days to tackle anything and everything. Your boss Mercury, now going backwards, is in powerful Scorpio, so it's best to take advantage of this.

CANCER: You may believe you have plenty of time to complete anything that is currently on hold. However, Mercury is now going backwards in your cousin sign Scorpio, so it will likely take longer.

LEO: You could be planning for a busy time ahead until the end of the year. You have the best planets in your house now to assist you; however, health is important, so rest up when needed.

VIRGO: Stress is occasionally no stranger in your life. It has probably been more of a problem recently, as your boss Mercury is now moving backwards in powerful Scorpio, and the current full moon in your cousin sign Taurus can keep you on your toes. You need to ease up.

LIBRA: Now that Mercury is going backwards along with your boss Venus in your money house, you should not expect too much new cash flow. The good news is that some money from the past can come in for you.

SCORPIO: Now that you have begun your new year, you can start planning a new way to tackle your overall future outlook. Your general life will improve now that you have Venus and Mercury slowing down in your life. Happy birthday!

SAGITTARIUS: You may feel that some folks do not always have your highest good in mind. Your boss Jupiter is moving through your cousin sign Leo and is in a mellow mood, so it's a time to back away from arguments.

CAPRICORN: With your boss, strict Saturn, in fiery Aries, you could be forgiven for sometimes feeling out of control. Any relationship situations are now up for evaluation. Just remember not to overreact.

AQUARIUS: This is your time to plan your next steps forward, so get going on releasing anything or anybody who could be negative or toxic. Uranus, your boss, is now moving forward, and anything is possible.

PISCES: Recent events in your general life may have changed your plans in several areas, but it will be better in the long run. Expect better news soon regarding your overall life.

Rio Ngumoha provided the spark as Liverpool came from two goals down to beat Villarreal 4-3 at Anfield in the Champions League on Tuesday.

Andoni Iraola's side endured a dismal opening half-hour but were given hope by Alexis Mac Allister's goal before Ngumoha set up Ronald Araujo to level on the brink of half-time.

Eighteen-year-old Ngumoha then did superbly to tee up Mac Allister after the break as Liverpool hit the front for the first time, before Florian Wirtz scored his first club goal of the season.

Ultimately, Iraola's side made it three wins out of three in Europe, but they did not make things easy for themselves.

Liverpool were punished instantly after a sloppy start when Renato Veiga played a long ball that Virgil van Dijk should have dealt with, but the captain's header back to Alisson was weak and intercepted by Georges Mikautadze, who finished with his left foot to give Villarreal the lead.

Nathan Saliba then played a simple ball through the heart of Liverpool's defence and Sergi Cardona slotted past Alisson to send the 700 travelling fans wild.

Phil Foden scored a sublime hat-trick as he produced a virtuoso display to help Manchester City return to winning ways in the Champions League group phase in thrashing Greek side AEK Athens, 5-1.

City needed to show a response after being beaten 4-2 at home by holders Paris St-Germain last week and they reacted in the perfect manner with a dominant performance.

Enzo Maresca's side had Foden in fine form for the victory, with the England international scoring three times and also providing an assist in a superb, all-round display.

Elliot Anderson reacted quickest to poke home and set City on their way after fellow summer signing Enzo Fernandez clipped a free-kick against the crossbar, while Allan also rattled the woodwork shortly after.

Foden, who scored his first goal since December at the weekend, found the net again to add City's second, collecting Rico Lewis' pass before unleashing a thumping finish into the roof of the net.

AEK Athens had failed to threaten in the opening period but hit back seven minutes after the restart as full-back Stavros Piliros drilled in a composed finish with his side's first shot on target.

But City restored control thereafter – Foden setting up Rayan Cherki to stroke home a trademark finish before the England midfielder struck a glorious first-time strike into the top corner and then completed his treble from close range 11 minutes later.

City will aim to continue their flawless start in the Premier League on Saturday when they travel to Aston Villa.

Villa too strong for Viking

Aston Villa continued the impressive start to their Champions League campaign with a comfortable victory over Viking at Villa Park Tuesday night.

Villa made it three wins from three, following their 6-0 demolition of Fenerbahce, by easing past the Norwegian side who pushed Bayern Munich all the way to draw 3-3 in the last round of matches.

Unai Emery's side were on top from the start, Viking living dangerously on several occasions before Ross Barkley turned in Ibrahim Mbaye's corner at the near post after 23 minutes.

Villa continued to dominate and doubled their lead eight minutes before half-time, Emiliano Buendia scoring from the spot after Alysson was tripped by Zlatko Tripic, the decision given after a VAR review.

Viking showed more attacking intent at the start of the second half, but Villa wrapped up another three points in the Champions League when the impressive Alysson's cross was turned into his own net by Henrik Heggheim after 62 minutes.

It paved the way for a comfortable conclusion as Villa closed out a victory that was another emphatic statement from the great European specialist Emery.

Alejandro Garnacho emerged as a substitute to produce a lively cameo, almost getting on the scoresheet, only to see his shot saved by Viking keeper Arlid Ostbo.

Viking pulled a goal back with four minutes left, Peter Christiansen's acrobatic finish given by VAR after initially being ruled offside, but nothing could spoil another satisfying night for Emery, Villa's 12th consecutive home win in European competition.

Bournemouth stun mighty Milan

Bournemouth ran out comfortable winners against 10-man AC Milan on Thursday to maintain their perfect start to the Europa League at Vitality Stadium.

Penalties from Justin Kluivert and Marcus Tavernier, and a late free-kick from substitute Amine Adli, helped the Cherries to a dominant victory over the seven-time European Cup winners.

It was Milan manager Ruben Amorim's first match in England since his sacking by Manchester United in January.

Marco Rose's side dominated from kick-off, with Evanilson heading the ball on to defender Koni de Winter's arm to win an early penalty.

After a VAR check, Greek referee Vasilis Fotias pointed to the spot and Justin Kluivert, son of former Milan striker Patrick, kept his cool to send goalkeeper Mike Maignan the wrong way despite attempts by opposition players to distract him.

Bournemouth continued to rain down efforts on Milan's goal as the early effects of Storm Austin hit the south coast, with Kluivert, Ben Gannon-Doak and Antonio Silva all going close.

It was then a moment of madness from Maignan that effectively ended Milan's hopes of a comeback, with the France keeper sent off for shoving midfielder Tyler Adams in the face in the 27th minute.

After almost five minutes of remonstrations from the Italian side, Marcus Tavernier repli-Fernandes stays captain despite outburst after Como humble United Bruno Fernandes will remain as Manchester United captain and will not be disciplined for his post-match criticism of Michael Carrick after the 4-1 Champions League defeat by Como in midweek.

The United skipper criticized Carrick's tactics for the game, then said it was up to the United head coach and his backroom team, not the players, to spot any issues and change them.

It was seen by many externally as a challenge to Carrick's authority, just eight days after United defender Lisandro Martinez criticized director of football Jason Wilcox and the club's summer recruitment.

Inside Old Trafford, there is sympathy for Fernandes for the position he found himself in.

The Portugal midfielder did 10 post-match interviews in Como, despite being replaced by Joshua Zirkzee midway through the second half.

While there is disappointment at some of his comments, it is acknowledged Fernandes' annoyance was understandable given the manner of the loss, which was one of the worst in United's European history.

Outspoken: Bruno's not happy...

It remains to be seen whether Fernandes will be picked for Sunday's Premier League encounter with Bournemouth at Old Trafford. Carrick will be asked about the situation when he holds his pre-game news conference on Friday.

Meanwhile, former United striker Wayne Rooney said he was in "shock" and "disbelief" at the performance against Como and he is as "worried as I've been for a long time" at the situation at Old Trafford.

And, while he understands the questioning of Carrick, a close personal friend of the former England and United skipper, Rooney also called the players "selfish" and said "they're like babies" in the wake of the controversial comments from both Martinez and Fernandes.

"When Martinez came out, I said this is an absolute nightmare because it will rip the dressing room apart," Rooney told the United Stand podcast.

"That was the start. We've seen it now with Bruno and you're going to see it with more players because they don't want to take responsibility."

cated Kluivert's efforts by sending Maignan's replacement, Lorenzo Torriani, the wrong way to make it 2-0 from the penalty spot.

After the interval, substitute Rayan went closest to adding to the scoreline with Alex Toth coming off with what looked like a hamstring injury.

That was until Adli curled a 20-yard free-kick in at the near post less than seven minutes after coming on, with Rayan later going close to making it four as Milan failed to muster a shot on target over 90 minutes.

This was after Rose brought off Adams, Tavernier and Kluivert in the 62nd minute to rest players before Sunday's Premier League trip to struggling Manchester United.

Bournemouth ended the night third in the 36-team Europa League league phase, while Milan dropped to 24th.
